Nation In "Terrible" Danger Of World War, Rayburn Says

House Speaker Breaks Into UMT Debate To Warn Chamber Against "Complacency"

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Speaker Sam Rayburn broke into debate on the draft-universal military training bill today to say the nation is in "terrible" danger of a third world war.

He did not give backing in so many words to the UMT section of the measure but he warned the House earnestly against "complacency" over the future. He promised to speak again later and give some more information he believes his colleagues lack.

Fresh from a White House briefing on Korea, the Texas Democrat told of a massing of troops in Korea and Manchuria "and not all of them Chinese Communists by a great extent."

Asked off the floor if he meant Russians, the speaker replied:

"I'm standing now on what I have said."

Caution For The Future

In the brief speech Rayburn told the lawmakers in solemn tones:

"I say in all earnestness that it is my firm belief that we are in greater danger of an expanding war today than we have been at any time since the close of the world war in 1945.

This was his caution for the future:

"This complacency, this winning of a little battle in Korea, had better not lull the American people to sleep, because I think we stand in the face of a terrible danger and maybe the beginning of world war three."

Rayburn took to the floor, something he seldom does unless an issue he and the administration rate vial is in doubt, shortly after a bitter attack on the military bill by Rep. Barden (D-NC).

Barden demanded passage of a draft measure alone, with universal training left to separate legislation.

College Deferment Standards

While sharp debate went on in the House, draft headquarters came out with the standards by which bright students will be deferred for further college work.

Deferment for one more year of study will be granted, Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey announced, for freshmen who rank in the upper half of their classes, sophomores in the upper two-thirds and juniors in the upper three-fourths.

They may also rate deferment by scoring 70 in the aptitude tests to be held over the nation May 25, June 16 and June 30.

U. S. Korean War Casualties Reach Total Of 58,550

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Announced American casualties in Korea reached 58,550 today, a rise of 1,430 in a week.

The total, representing casualties reported to next of kin through March 30, included 8,753 killed, 39,023 wounded and 10,774 missing in action.

Of the wounded, 1,025 have since died. The missing figure includes 87 known dead, making total combat deaths 9,865.

The missing figure also includes 1,094 who have since returned to U. S. control and 112 known prisoners of war, leaving 9,481 currently missing.

Customers Help Curb Inflation, Wilson Reports

Changes In Parity Formula Considered

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The customers are taking care of inflation for themselves in some lines by simply refusing to buy and forcing price cuts, Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson told Congress today.

He related, without names, one case in which he said the biggest manufacturer in a certain field had shown a high "degree of avariciousness" but bumped into the law of supply and demand and is getting ready to cut by more than 10 percent.

Later in a talk with reporters Wilson said "there are some few other signs, similar signs in other industries" but would not go into detail.

Parity Changes Considered

The discussion of price action by consumers came in an appearance by Wilson before the Senate-House "watchdog" committee on mobilization, in which he gave emphasis to these other points:

1. There will be a proposal for some changes in the way the parity formula is applied. This formula is used to determine what farm statutes call fair prices for farm products.

2. Wilson is "really hopeful" that administration appeals for voluntary cooperation in holding down credit will work.

3. Inflation can be controlled and if everybody works together it may be possible to take off emergency price and pay curbs in 1953.

Labor "Cooperating"

4. Labor in the actual production plants has been "cooperating very well" with the defense program and "every effort is being made to work out a better understanding" with the United Labor Policy Committee, union common front group which has walked out of mobilization agencies.

5. The administration hopes enough civilian goods and food will be available to avoid rationing.

6. Since farms are being mechanized more and more, it should be possible to meet agricultural production goals with the manpower and materials in sight.

TV Actress Regains Custody Of Daughter

LOS ANGELES, April 4 (AP) — A television actress' long fight to regain custody of her love child ended suddenly and dramatically today.

The baby's foster parents gave up. "You're wonderful," exclaimed the unwed mother, Stella Shouel, 22. "My prayers have been answered."

"We recognize the great mother love of Miss Shouel for Nancy Ann," said Mrs. Harry I. Levy of North Hollywood, tearfully. She and her husband were given permission to visit the nine-months-old child any time they wish.

It was a happy ending to a bitter court battle between the actress and the Levys, who had charged Miss Shouel with abandonment.

Seven Jews Die In Border Clash

TEL AVIV, Israel, April 4 (AP) — Seven Jewish policemen were killed and three other wounded today in a clash on the Israeli-Syrian border, an Israeli government spokesman said tonight.

The spokesman accused Syrian military forces of penetrating a portion of the demilitarized border area southeast of the Lake of Tiberias (Sea of Galilee) that is under Israel's sovereignty.

He said seven Israeli policemen were killed and another wounded when a truck in which they were riding was attacked and captured by Syrian forces. The other two Israeli policemen wounded, he said, were in a second truck.

The incident is the "most flagrant violation of the Israeli-Syrian armistice so far," the spokesman said.

Ferrer And Judy Holliday Accused Of Red Leanings

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP) — Academy Award Winners Jose Ferrer and Judy Holliday, and two prominent university scientists, were listed today by the House Un-American Activities Committee among those whose names have been associated with the current Communist "peace offensive."

Their names, with scores of others, appeared in a 166-page report just issued by the committee analyzing the peace offensive, which it called "the most dangerous hoax ever devised by the international communist conspiracy."

Ferrer, who won the coveted Academy Award for his role in "Cyrano De Bergerac," is under subpoena for appearance soon in the committee's investigation of Communism in Hollywood. He has emphatically denied any Red leanings.

His name, and that of Miss Holliday, who won this year's Oscar as the dumb blonde in "Born Yesterday," were listed among persons purportedly affiliated with from five to ten Communist-front organiztions.

The committee also named them among sponsors of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace in New York, in 1949, which it identified as the start of the "peace" campaign in the United States.

In a section entitled, "Subversion Of Scientists Through The Peace Movement," the report names Dr. Linus Carl Pauling of the University of California, and Dr. Philip D. Morrison of Cornell University, as having a "leading role" in the Communist "peace" campaign.

Mormon Church President Dies

SALT LAKE CITY, April 4 (AP)—George Albert Smith (above), slender grey-bearded president of the Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) Church, died today on his 81st birthday.

Death came at 7:27 p. m. It followed several weeks of serious illness which began when the church leader was stricken with a virus infection during the winter.

The spiritual leader of more than a million Mormons, President Smith had headed the church not quite six years. He became President May 21, 1945, a week after the death of his predecessor, Heber J. Grant.

Resale Of Army Surplus Trucks Netted $425,000

Vehicles Bought For $200, Sold For $3,900

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP) — House investigators learned today of a $1,270,000 deal in which Army surplus trucks were bought for as little as $200 and sold back to the government for as much as $3,900 apiece.

Chicago Truck Dealer Morris Green said he and associates netted $425,000 from the resale of 1,000 surplus trucks they bought in the Philippines.

Green said, however, that they had to pay out some $325,000 in fees, legal costs and commissions, including:

$127,000 to the Schnitzer Bros Steel Company of Portland, Ore., which tipped them off that the Atomic Energy Commission was in the market for heavy duty trucks.

$42,000 To Freeman Estate

$42,000 in an out-of-court settlement to the estate of Joseph Freeman of Los Angeles. Green said he later learned Freeman had been "mixed up with the Garsson-May deal, or something like that."

Joseph F. Freeman was indicted on bribe conspiracy charges in 1947 with former Rep. Andrew J. May of Kentucky and Munitions Manufacturers Henry and Murray Garsson.

May and the Garssons were convicted and served prison terms. Freeman won a directed verdict of acquittal.

Nothing Illegal Implied

Green's testimony today was before an Executive Expenditures subcommittee, which is looking into high-profit deals in military surplus goods left in the Philippines and in Western Germany after World War Two.

Chairman Bonner (D-NC) announced that the committee has not implied anything illegal about such transactions.

"But what develops in the hearings will be another matter," Bonner said.

Gen. Ridgway Accompanies Strong Force

Push Aimed At Red Defense Triangle

TOKYO, Thursday, April 5 (AP)—The U. S. Eighth Army commander crossed the 38th parallel with strong Allied forces Wednesday in Central Korea. They headed into the area of the Reds' biggest build-up.

This crossing, the first in the mountainous center, put the United Nations inside Red Korea in force on all fronts. They already had crossed in the west and the east.

Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway moved forward with his troops over the old political boundary north of Chunchon.

Westward across 40 miles of active front, other Allied forces made at least two other crossings Wednesday and drove ahead for gains up to four miles. The central front push penetrated one mile across bleak, mountainous country.

Enemy Resistance Heavy

Enemy resistance was heavy. Northeast of Chunchon, near the parallel, Chinese Reds repeatedly beat back attempts by U. S. soldiers to cross the Soyang River.

By nightfall, the American forces had crossed the river in amphibious craft and stormed up hills to the north in the face of heavy enemy fire. Then the Reds withdrew.

The Communists made the going heavy at many points.

But Gen. Ridgway said "things are progressing very smoothly" in the drive north of Chunchon. That town is eight miles below 38.

The central push is aimed directly at Hwachon, one point of a Red defense triangle. The Reds for two months have been massing divisions of an estimated 500,000-man force in Central Korea.

Americans, Greeks and Thai (Siamese) troops teamed in the central front atack. They moved up in rugged wilderness country. Porters manhandled food and ammunition to them up the steep hills.

Artillery, Planes Back Drive

Artillery and plane attacks bolstered the drive. Hundreds of U. S. Fifth Air Force planes swarmed down on the entrenched Reds with bombs, napalm (jellied gasoline) rockets and machine-gun fire.

The Reds resisted with mortars, rifles and automatic weapons.

At one point in a terrific Allied artillery barrage five North Korean soldiers surrendered.

The Allied strategy appeared to be to find where the Chinese and North Koreans have stacked most of their manpower in an estimated 63 divisions for an expected spring counteroffensive. But the Allies struck first.

U. N. forces killed or wounded 1,490 Reds in ground action Wednesday, boosting to 200,000 or more the total ground casualties inflicted since the Allied offensive began Jan. 25.

UAW Reelects Walter Reuther

CLEVELAND, April 4 (AP)—Walter Reuther tightened his reins on the 1,250,000-member CIO United Auto Workers union today by winning an uncontested fourth term as president.

Reuther's hopelessly feeble opposition collapsed at the last minute and he was reelected by acclamation.

The unopposed victory testified to the fiery, 43-year-old Reuther's strong and growing power in what claims to be the nation's biggest union. It was in sharp contrast with the situation of only a few years ago, when the union was split from top to bottom with vicious factional feuds.

The anti-Reuther group unexpectedly pulled out candidates it had planned to run against both Reuther and UAW Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey.

The only contests — and they weren't much—were for the two international vice pesidencies.

Richard T. Gosser and John W. Livingston who now hold the posts, won handily over three opponents in an hours-long roll-call vote.

Bookie Jailed, Fined

BALTIMORE, April 4 (AP)—Leo Quattrocche, 42-year-old convicted numbers writer and bookmaker, today was sentenced to nine months in prison and fined $7,300. Judge Joseph Sherbow also imposed court costs of more than $500.

White House Hits Daniels Article As "Distortion"

Congress Tenure Limit Not Favored

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The White House gave a scolding today to President Truman's old friend and biographer, Jonathan Daniels.

An official statement said a magazine article written by Daniels, reporting the President favors a 12-year limit on the service of senators and House members, was "an entirely misleading distortion" of something Mr. Truman said jokingly and confidentially a long time ago.

Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, denied he had broken the President's confidence. At the same time he said he was sorry that "publication of this article came at a time when it embarrassed the President in connection with the congressional situation."

Article Appears In Colliers

"I am heartily with him in the great fight going on in Congress," the publisher-author said in a statement at Raleigh.

Daniels' article will appear in Colliers magazine next Friday. It represents Mr. Truman as favoring a 12-year limit for lawmakers in the interest of more efficient government.

White House Press Secretary Joseph Short said the President never has seriously considered proposing such a restriction and "certainly has no intention of making such a proposal now or later."

Mr. Truman served 10 years in the Senate himself, and some of his friends said he would like to go back there after leaving the presidency.

Backed Truman In 1948

A one-time White House press secretary himself, Daniels staunchly supported Mr. Truman during the States Righters revolt against him in the presidential campaign of 1948, and helped write some of the President's speeches. He is the author of "The Man Of Independence," a biography of the President, written after many conversations with the President, his family and friends.

In the Colliers article, Daniels said the President would favor limiting House members to three four-year terms, and senators to two six-year terms.

Grand Jury Refuses To Indict Newscaster For Atom Lab Entry

CHICAGO, April 4 (AP) — The federal grand jury today declined to indict Paul Harvey, ABC newscaster, for his night-time entry into grounds of the Argonne National Laboratory, an atomic energy project.

In presenting the subject to the grand jury several weeks ago, U. S. Attorney Otto Kerner, Jr., said he would seek an indictment charging Harvey with making public certain information relating to national defense.

The jury heard a score of witnesses including Dr. Walter Zinn, director of the laboratory; Rep. Fred Busbey (R-Ill), and Harvey himself. Before going before the jury Harvey said he had climbed the fence of the laboratory as part of his effort to demonstrate what he called lax security at the installation.

Baby Worth Weight In Silver Dollars

ELKHART, Ind., April 4 (AP) — Two-week-old Stephen C. German will be worth his weight in silver dollars next Sunday — about 130.

Little Stephen is the son of Second Lt. and Mrs. James S. German. He was born at Selma, Ala., where his father, a West Point graduate, is in advanced flight training at Craig Field.

Saturday, Grandpa Wendell German will arrive at Craig Field from Elkhart to pay off a promise that if his sons's first born child was a boy he'd match his weight ounce for ounce with silver dollars.

A newly-minted dollar weighs one ounce. So Grandpa and Grandma German will have to have about 130 silver dollars with them next Saturday.

Russian Tactics At Paris Parley Assailed By U. S.

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The United States charged today that Russia's real aim in the Paris Big Four talks is to destroy West German participation in the defense system being built by the Western Powers against "the threat of Soviet Communist aggression."

"If the Russians should be successful in achieving this," a statement broadcast by the Voice of America said, "they would have removed a potential barrier to the Communist takeover of Western Europe."

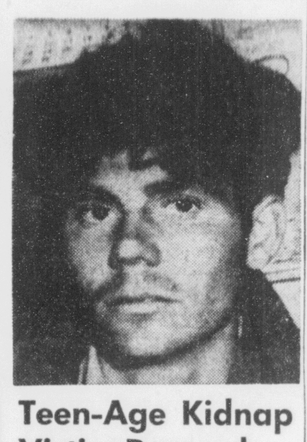
The statement, released by the State Department in an unusual step, declared that the U. S. is anxious to arrange for a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers, which is the purpose of the Paris talks.

But it made officially and emphatically clear that this government will not agree to any "trick wording" by which the Kremlin seeks to outwit the West and forestall the development of an adequate defense force.

(In Paris, Russia made some concessions toward a foreign ministers' agenda at a meeting of the Big Four deputies today. The three western powers said the concessions, presented in a new draft proposal, did not go far enough.)

26 Jews Hurt In Riot

SALZBURG, Austria, April 4 (AP)—Twenty-six Jews were injured tonight in a 90-minute riot during which displaced persons, police, and a hostile Austrian crowd clashed, Jewish community leaders reported.



Teen-Age Kidnap Victim Rescued; Ex-Convict Held

Posse Rescues Kidnaped Girl; Ex-Convict Held

Teen-Ager Attacked Two Hours Earlier

McALESTER, Okla., April 4 (AP) — A 16-year-old high school girl, threatened with death during a 50-hour terror trip, was rescued by a posse today two hours after she said she was raped by her abductor.

Jackie Parris was found huddled next to a fire under a rock ledge 35 miles from here at 1 a.m. Across from her, tired and unkempt, sat Robert Phillips, 23, who gave up to a posse without a struggle.

Pittsburgh County officials said they are preparing kidnap charges against Phillips. County Attorney Wayne Russell of neighboring Latimer County, is to talk with the girl tomorrow to discuss possible filing of a rape charge in that county.

Threatened With Death

The attack allegedly occurred in a tin pipeline shack in the mountains of Latimer County.

The plucky, pretty little high school girl told her rescuers how she had been threatened with death in the rugged trip through the mountains of Eastern Oklahoma, once the hideout for western badmen.

The posse, led by Chester Palmer, Kinta sawmill operator, was attracted to the girl and Phillips by a blazing fire.

The 16-year-old girl and her date, Bill Coghill, 17, were abducted Sunday night after a man forced himself into their car outside a skating rink here.

Taken To Hospital

Coghill gained his freedom several hours later when their car was stuck in a creek south of Kinta and the abductor walked away with the girl.

Before she was taken to a McAlester hospital and put under a doctor's care, Jackie related her 50 hours of hunger, cold and finally her rape.

The girl told rescuers that several times Phillips threatened to kill her and take his own life. Jackie said she tried to persuade him to give up.

Catches Mumps At 99

QUINCY, Ill., April 4 (AP) — A person can't be lucky all the time, Mrs. Anna Pilatt feels.

As a girl she escaped most of the childhood diseases. Today she was laid up with the mumps. She will be 99 on Sept. 16.

Present Of Sight Is Given To Blind Seaman By Friend

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP) — One of the greatest of all gifts—sight—came today to a blind young seaman, a present from a brave and generous friend.

Bandages were taken off for the first time from the right eye of 24-year-old Philip Pron and doctors said he can see. It will be weeks before they know the full extent to which vision is restored, however.

But a little sight was enough for Pron.

"I am very happy," he said.

He has been blind for five years since an accident at sea. His right eye was undamaged, however, except for the cornea. A week ago a healthy cornea — the transparent membrane covering the front of the eye — was transplanted to the eye.

The cornea came from the blind right eye of Pron's good friend and fellow-patient, Eric Joseph, 27. He lost the sight of one eye when he was a prizefighter in England, But its cornea was sound.

Joseph met Pron in a Staten Island Marine hospital and offered his good cornea when he learned it might help his friend.

Gls-To-Europe Resolution Is Passed, 69-21

Approves Sending 4 Divisions To 'Ike'

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The Senate gave full endorsement tonight to sending 100,000 American soldiers—four combat divisions and their supporting troops—to the defense of Western Europe.

But it called on President Truman to obtain the approval of Congress before ordering any more ground troops into the international army commanded by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

These are the cornerstones of the Senate's historic troops-for-Europe resolution by a vote of 69 to 21.

Action came on the second anniversary of the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty in Washington April 4, 1949.

It climaxed nearly three months of bitter debate about what contribution the United States should make in fighting men to help guard Western Europe against the possibility of Russian aggression.

Not Binding On President

The resolution expresses only the sense of the Senate. It is not legally binding upon the President, who claims full authority to deploy troops around the world but who has said he will consult Congress as a matter of courtesy.

Yet the opinion of the Senate will carry great weight at home and abroad.

Moreover, the Senate immediately approved 45 to 41, a concurrent, or two-house, resolution couched in much the same language. However the measure could not be sent immediately to the House for action there because supporters failed to nail down the result.

Sens. M-Clellan (D-Ark) and Knowland (R-Calif) tried to make the vote final by having the Senate act on a motion to reconsider, but Sen. McFarland of Arizona made the point of order that the Senate already had agreed to take up other business. In that situation any member who voted for the resolution, or who was absent at the time of the vote, may move within 48 hours to reconsider it.

Invitation To House

Approval of the second resolution was an invitation by the Senate to the House to join in expressing its opinion on the issues. Like the Senate measure, it would be merely advisory if endorsed by the house.

Forty-two Democrats and 27 Republicans voted for the Senate measure. Nineteen Republicans and two Democrats—Ellender of Louisiana and Fulbright of Arkansas—voted against it.

It required three days of argument and roll calls to reach the vote taken tonight.

Late today the senators handed the administration another setback by adopting an amendment saying consider tion should be given to inviting Western Germany and Spain to join in the defense of Europe under the North Atlantic pact.

Sponsored by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis), the amendment was tacked on the end of the Senate resolution. Administration men and others fought the amendment on the ground it was neither the time nor place to consider such an invitation.

Advertising Tax Proposal Rapped

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) said today an excise tax on advertising—called "desirable" by the staff of a congressional committee he heads—would "involve great dangers."

The tax suggestion, advanced by the staff of the Senate-House Economic Committee, was criticized by Sen. Bricker (R-Ohio) and Sen. Benton (D-Conn.), a former advertising man and a member of the committee.

The proposal was set forth by the staff in its annual report, which was put out over the weekend together with the committee's own report.

"From a general economic point of view," the staff said, "one of the most desirable excise taxes that could be levied would be a tax on advertising, especially on that urging consumers to buy consumer goods.

"This is obviously not the time to whip up inflation further by stimulating consumer buying, nor is it the time for making still worse the already grave shortage of so vital and critical a material as newsprint or woodpulp.

"Yet, notwithstanding this, an increased volume of advertising continues to spur on to additional spending."

The incident is the "most flagrant violation of the Israeli-Syrian armistice so far," the spokesman said.

Ferrer And Judy Holliday Accused Of Red Leanings

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP) — Academy Award Winners Jose Ferrer and Judy Holliday, and two prominent university scientists, were listed today by the House Un-American Activities Committee among those whose names have been associated with the current Communist "peace offensive."

Their names, with scores of others, appeared in a 166-page report just issued by the committee analyzing the peace offensive, which it called "the most dangerous hoax ever devised by the international communist conspiracy."

Ferrer, who won the coveted Academy Award for his role in "Cyrano De Bergerac," is under subpoena for appearance soon in the committee's investigation of Communism in Hollywood. He has emphatically denied any Red leanings.

His name, and that of Miss Holliday, who won this year's Oscar as the dumb blonde in "Born Yesterday," were listed among persons purportedly affiliated with from five to ten Communist-front organiztions.

The committee also named them among sponsors of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace in New York, in 1949, which it identified as the start of the "peace" campaign in the United States.

In a section entitled, "Subversion Of Scientists Through The Peace Movement," the report names Dr. Linus Carl Pauling of the University of California, and Dr. Philip D. Morrison of Cornell University, as having a "leading role" in the Communist "peace" campaign.

Gen. Ridgway Accompanies Strong Force

Push Aimed At Red Defense Triangle

TOKYO, Thursday, April 5 (AP)—The U. S. Eighth Army commander crossed the 38th parallel with strong Allied forces Wednesday in Central Korea. They headed into the area of the Reds' biggest build-up.

This crossing, the first in the mountainous center, put the United Nations inside Red Korea in force on all fronts. They already had crossed in the west and the east.

Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway moved forward with his troops over the old political boundary north of Chunchon.

Westward across 40 miles of active front, other Allied forces made at least two other crossings Wednesday and drove ahead for gains up to four miles. The central front push penetrated one mile across bleak, mountainous country.

Enemy Resistance Heavy

Enemy resistance was heavy. Northeast of Chunchon, near the parallel, Chinese Reds repeatedly beat back attempts by U. S. soldiers to cross the Soyang River.

By nightfall, the American forces had crossed the river in amphibious craft and stormed up hills to the north in the face of heavy enemy fire. Then the Reds withdrew.

The Communists made the going heavy at many points.

But Gen. Ridgway said "things are progressing very smoothly" in the drive north of Chunchon. That town is eight miles below 38.

The central push is aimed directly at Hwachon, one point of a Red defense triangle. The Reds for two months have been massing divisions of an estimated 500,000-man force in Central Korea.

Americans, Greeks and Thai (Siamese) troops teamed in the central front atack. They moved up in rugged wilderness country. Porters manhandled food and ammunition to them up the steep hills.

Artillery, Planes Back Drive

Artillery and plane attacks bolstered the drive. Hundreds of U. S. Fifth Air Force planes swarmed down on the entrenched Reds with bombs, napalm (jellied gasoline) rockets and machine-gun fire.

The Reds resisted with mortars, rifles and automatic weapons.

At one point in a terrific Allied artillery barrage five North Korean soldiers surrendered.

The Allied strategy appeared to be to find where the Chinese and North Koreans have stacked most of their manpower in an estimated 63 divisions for an expected spring counteroffensive. But the Allies struck first.

U. N. forces killed or wounded 1,490 Reds in ground action Wednesday, boosting to 200,000 or more the total ground casualties inflicted since the Allied offensive began Jan. 25.

UAW Reelects Walter Reuther

CLEVELAND, April 4 (AP)—Walter Reuther tightened his reins on the 1,250,000-member CIO United Auto Workers union today by winning an uncontested fourth term as president.

Reuther's hopelessly feeble opposition collapsed at the last minute and he was reelected by acclamation.

The unopposed victory testified to the fiery, 43-year-old Reuther's strong and growing power in what claims to be the nation's biggest union. It was in sharp contrast with the situation of only a few years ago, when the union was split from top to bottom with vicious factional feuds.

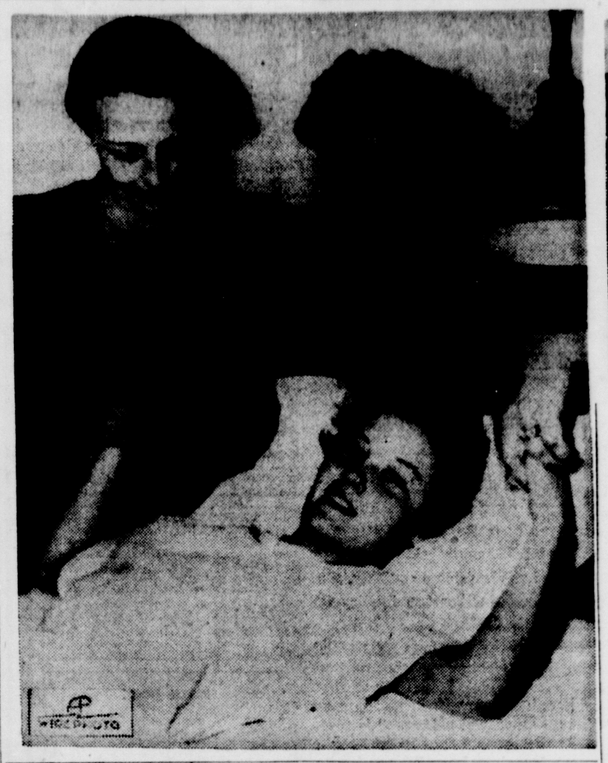
The anti-Reuther group unexpectedly pulled out candidates it had planned to run against both Reuther and UAW Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey.

The only contests — and they weren't much—were for the two international vice pesidencies.

Richard T. Gosser and John W. Livingston who now hold the posts, won handily over three opponents in an hours-long roll-call vote.

Bookie Jailed, Fined

BALTIMORE, April 4 (AP)—Leo Quattrocche, 42-year-old convicted numbers writer and bookmaker, today was sentenced to nine months in prison and fined $7,300. Judge Joseph Sherbow also imposed court costs of more than $500.



White House Hits Daniels Article As "Distortion"

Congress Tenure Limit Not Favored

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The White House gave a scolding today to President Truman's old friend and biographer, Jonathan Daniels.

An official statement said a magazine article written by Daniels, reporting the President favors a 12-year limit on the service of senators and House members, was "an entirely misleading distortion" of something Mr. Truman said jokingly and confidentially a long time ago.

Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, denied he had broken the President's confidence. At the same time he said he was sorry that "publication of this article came at a time when it embarrassed the President in connection with the congressional situation."

Article Appears In Colliers

"I am heartily with him in the great fight going on in Congress," the publisher-author said in a statement at Raleigh.

Daniels' article will appear in Colliers magazine next Friday. It represents Mr. Truman as favoring a 12-year limit for lawmakers in the interest of more efficient government.

White House Press Secretary Joseph Short said the President never has seriously considered proposing such a restriction and "certainly has no intention of making such a proposal now or later."

Mr. Truman served 10 years in the Senate himself, and some of his friends said he would like to go back there after leaving the presidency.

Backed Truman In 1948

A one-time White House press secretary himself, Daniels staunchly supported Mr. Truman during the States Righters revolt against him in the presidential campaign of 1948, and helped write some of the President's speeches. He is the author of "The Man Of Independence," a biography of the President, written after many conversations with the President, his family and friends.

In the Colliers article, Daniels said the President would favor limiting House members to three four-year terms, and senators to two six-year terms.

Grand Jury Refuses To Indict Newscaster For Atom Lab Entry

CHICAGO, April 4 (AP) — The federal grand jury today declined to indict Paul Harvey, ABC newscaster, for his night-time entry into grounds of the Argonne National Laboratory, an atomic energy project.

In presenting the subject to the grand jury several weeks ago, U. S. Attorney Otto Kerner, Jr., said he would seek an indictment charging Harvey with making public certain information relating to national defense.

The jury heard a score of witnesses including Dr. Walter Zinn, director of the laboratory; Rep. Fred Busbey (R-Ill), and Harvey himself. Before going before the jury Harvey said he had climbed the fence of the laboratory as part of his effort to demonstrate what he called lax security at the installation.

Baby Worth Weight In Silver Dollars

ELKHART, Ind., April 4 (AP) — Two-week-old Stephen C. German will be worth his weight in silver dollars next Sunday — about 130.

Little Stephen is the son of Second Lt. and Mrs. James S. German. He was born at Selma, Ala., where his father, a West Point graduate, is in advanced flight training at Craig Field.

Saturday, Grandpa Wendell German will arrive at Craig Field from Elkhart to pay off a promise that if his sons's first born child was a boy he'd match his weight ounce for ounce with silver dollars.

A newly-minted dollar weighs one ounce. So Grandpa and Grandma German will have to have about 130 silver dollars with them next Saturday.

Russian Tactics At Paris Parley Assailed By U. S.

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The United States charged today that Russia's real aim in the Paris Big Four talks is to destroy West German participation in the defense system being built by the Western Powers against "the threat of Soviet Communist aggression."

"If the Russians should be successful in achieving this," a statement broadcast by the Voice of America said, "they would have removed a potential barrier to the Communist takeover of Western Europe."

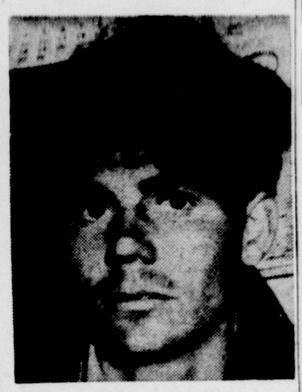
The statement, released by the State Department in an unusual step, declared that the U. S. is anxious to arrange for a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers, which is the purpose of the Paris talks.

But it made officially and emphatically clear that this government will not agree to any "trick wording" by which the Kremlin seeks to outwit the West and forestall the development of an adequate defense force.

(In Paris, Russia made some concessions toward a foreign ministers' agenda at a meeting of the Big Four deputies today. The three western powers said the concessions, presented in a new draft proposal, did not go far enough.)

26 Jews Hurt In Riot

SALZBURG, Austria, April 4 (AP)—Twenty-six Jews were injured tonight in a 90-minute riot during which displaced persons, police, and a hostile Austrian crowd clashed, Jewish community leaders reported.



Teen-Age Kidnap Victim Rescued; Ex-Convict Held

Posse Rescues Kidnaped Girl; Ex-Convict Held

Teen-Ager Attacked Two Hours Earlier

McALESTER, Okla., April 4 (AP) — A 16-year-old high school girl, threatened with death during a 50-hour terror trip, was rescued by a posse today two hours after she said she was raped by her abductor.

Jackie Parris was found huddled next to a fire under a rock ledge 35 miles from here at 1 a.m. Across from her, tired and unkempt, sat Robert Phillips, 23, who gave up to a posse without a struggle.

Pittsburgh County officials said they are preparing kidnap charges against Phillips. County Attorney Wayne Russell of neighboring Latimer County, is to talk with the girl tomorrow to discuss possible filing of a rape charge in that county.

Threatened With Death

The attack allegedly occurred in a tin pipeline shack in the mountains of Latimer County.

The plucky, pretty little high school girl told her rescuers how she had been threatened with death in the rugged trip through the mountains of Eastern Oklahoma, once the hideout for western badmen.

The posse, led by Chester Palmer, Kinta sawmill operator, was attracted to the girl and Phillips by a blazing fire.

The 16-year-old girl and her date, Bill Coghill, 17, were abducted Sunday night after a man forced himself into their car outside a skating rink here.

Taken To Hospital

Coghill gained his freedom several hours later when their car was stuck in a creek south of Kinta and the abductor walked away with the girl.

Before she was taken to a McAlester hospital and put under a doctor's care, Jackie related her 50 hours of hunger, cold and finally her rape.

The girl told rescuers that several times Phillips threatened to kill her and take his own life. Jackie said she tried to persuade him to give up.

Catches Mumps At 99

QUINCY, Ill., April 4 (AP) — A person can't be lucky all the time, Mrs. Anna Pilatt feels.

As a girl she escaped most of the childhood diseases. Today she was laid up with the mumps. She will be 99 on Sept. 16.

Present Of Sight Is Given To Blind Seaman By Friend

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP) — One of the greatest of all gifts—sight—came today to a blind young seaman, a present from a brave and generous friend.

Bandages were taken off for the first time from the right eye of 24-year-old Philip Pron and doctors said he can see. It will be weeks before they know the full extent to which vision is restored, however.

But a little sight was enough for Pron.

"I am very happy," he said.

He has been blind for five years since an accident at sea. His right eye was undamaged, however, except for the cornea. A week ago a healthy cornea — the transparent membrane covering the front of the eye — was transplanted to the eye.

The cornea came from the blind right eye of Pron's good friend and fellow-patient, Eric Joseph, 27. He lost the sight of one eye when he was a prizefighter in England. But its cornea was sound.

Joseph met Pron in a Staten Island Marine hospital and offered his good cornea when he learned it might help his friend.

Gls-To-Europe Resolution Is Passed, 69-21

Approves Sending 4 Divisions To 'Ike'

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The Senate gave full endorsement tonight to sending 100,000 American soldiers—four combat divisions and their supporting troops—to the defense of Western Europe.

But it called on President Truman to obtain the approval of Congress before ordering any more ground troops into the international army commanded by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

These are the cornerstones of the Senate's historic troops-for-Europe resolution by a vote of 69 to 21.

Action came on the second anniversary of the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty in Washington April 4, 1949.

It climaxed nearly three months of bitter debate about what contribution the United States should make in fighting men to help guard western Europe against the possibility of Russian aggression.

Not Binding On President

The resolution expresses only the sense of the Senate. It is not legally binding on the President, who claims full authority to deploy troops around the world but who has said he will consult Congress as a matter of courtesy.

Yet the opinion of the Senate will carry great weight at home and abroad.

Moreover, the Senate immediately approved 45 to 41, a concurrent, or two-house, resolution couched in much the same language. However the measure could not be sent immediately to the House for action there because supporters failed to nail down the result.

Sens. McClellan (D-Ark) and Knowland (R-Calif) tried to make the vote final by having the Senate act on a motion to reconsider, but Sen. McFarland of Arizona made the point of order that the Senate already had agreed to take up other business. In that situation any member who voted for the resolution, or who was absent at the time of the vote, may move within 48 hours to reconsider it.

Invitation To House

Approval of the second resolution was an invitation by the Senate to the House to join in expressing its opinion on the issues. Like the Senate measure, it would be merely advisory if endorsed by the house.

Forty-two Democrats and 27 Republicans voted for the Senate measure. Nineteen Republicans and two Democrats—Ellender of Louisiana and Fulbright of Arkansas—voted against it.

It required three days of argument and roll calls to reach the vote taken tonight.

Late today the senators handed the administration another setback by adopting an amendment saying consideration should be given to inviting Western Germany and Spain to join in the defense of Europe under the North Atlantic pact.

Sponsored by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis), the amendment was tacked on the end of the Senate resolution. Administration men and others fought the amendment on the ground it was neither the time nor place to consider such an invitation.

Advertising Tax Proposal Rapped

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) said today an excise tax on advertising—called "desirable" by the staff of a congressional committee he heads—would "involve great dangers."

The tax suggestion, advanced by the staff of the Senate-House Economic Committee, was criticized by Sen. Bricker (R-Ohio) and Sen. Benton (D-Conn.), a former advertising man and a member of the committee.

The proposal was set forth by the staff in its annual report, which was put out over the weekend together with the committee's own report.

"From a general economic point of view," the staff said, "one of the most desirable excise taxes that could be levied would be a tax on advertising, especially on that urging consumers to buy consumer goods.

"This is obviously not the time to whip up inflation further by stimulating consumer buying, nor is it the time for making still worse the already grave shortage of so vital and critical a material as newsprint or woodpulp.

"Yet, notwithstanding this, an increased volume of advertising continues to spur on to additional spending."

Weather Forecast
Partly cloudy and warmer today.

SENATE ADOPTS TROOP MEASURE

Allies Cross 38th In Central Korea

Nation In "Terrible" Danger Of World War, Rayburn Says

House Speaker Breaks Into UMT Debate To Warn Chamber Against "Complacency"

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Speaker Sam Rayburn broke into debate on the draft-universal military training bill today to say the nation is in "terrible" danger of a third world war.

He did not give backing in so many words to the UMT section of the measure but he warned the House earnestly against "complacency" over the future. He promised to speak again later and give some more information he believes his colleagues lack.

Fresh from a White House briefing on Korea, the Texas Democrat told of a massing of troops in Korea and Manchuria "and not all of them Chinese Communists by a great extent."

Asked off the floor if he meant Russians, the speaker replied:

"I'm standing now on what I have said."

Caution For The Future

In the brief speech Rayburn told the lawmakers in solemn tones:

"I say in all earnestness that it is my firm belief that we are in greater danger of an expanding war today than we have been at any time since the close of the world war in 1945.

This was his caution for the future:

"This complacency, this winning of a little battle in Korea, had better not lull the American people to sleep, because I think we stand in the face of a terrible danger and maybe the beginning of world war three."

Rayburn took to the floor, something he seldom does unless an issue he and the administration rate vial is in doubt, shortly after a bitter attack on the military bill by Rep. Barden (D-NC).

Barden demanded passage of a draft measure alone, with universal training left to separate legislation.

College Deferment Standards

While sharp debate went on in the House, draft headquarters came out with the standards by which bright students will be deferred for further college work.

Deferment for one more year of study will be granted, Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey announced, for freshmen who rank in the upper half of their classes, sophomores in the upper two-thirds and juniors in the upper three-fourths.

They may also rate deferment by scoring 70 in the aptitude tests to be held over the nation May 25, June 16 and June 30.

U. S. Korean War Casualties Reach Total Of 58,550

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Announced American casualties in Korea reached 58,550 today, a rise of 1,430 in a week.

The total, representing casualties reported to next of kin through March 30, included 8,753 killed, 39,023 wounded and 10,774 missing in action.

Of the wounded, 1,025 have since died. The missing figure includes 87 known dead, making total combat deaths 9,865.

The missing figure also includes 1,094 who have since returned to U. S. control and 112 known prisoners of war, leaving 9,481 currently missing.

Customers Help Curb Inflation, Wilson Reports

Changes In Parity Formula Considered

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP) —The customers are taking care of inflation for themselves in some lines by simply refusing to buy and forcing price cuts, Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson told Congress today.

He related, without names, one case in which he said the biggest manufacturer in a certain field had shown a high "degree of avariciousness" but bumped into the law of supply and demand and is getting ready to cut by more than 10 percent.

Later in a talk with reporters Wilson said "there are some few other signs, similar signs in other industries" but would not go into detail.

Parity Changes Considered

The discussion of price action by consumers came in an appearance by Wilson before the Senate-House "watchdog" committee on mobilization, in which he gave emphasis to these other points:

1. There will be a proposal for some changes in the way the parity formula is applied. This formula is used to determine what farm statutes call fair prices for farm products.

2. Wilson is "really hopeful" that administration appeals for voluntary cooperation in holding down credit will work.

3. Inflation can be controlled and if everybody works together it may be possible to take off emergency price and pay curbs in 1953.

Labor "Cooperating"

4. Labor in the actual production plants has been "cooperating very well" with the defense program and "every effort is being made to work out a better understanding" with the United Labor Policy Committee, union common front group which has walked out of mobilization agencies.

5. The administration hopes enough civilian goods and food will be available to avoid rationing.

6. Since farms are being mechanized more and more, it should be possible to meet agricultural production goals with the manpower and materials in sight.

TV Actress Regains Custody Of Daughter

LOS ANGELES, April 4 (AP) — A television actress' long fight to regain custody of her love child ended suddenly and dramatically today.

The baby's foster parents gave up. "You're wonderful," exclaimed the unwed mother, Stella Shouel, 22. "My prayers have been answered."

"We recognize the great mother love of Miss Shouel for Nancy Ann," said Mrs. Harry I. Levy of North Hollywood, tearfully. She and her husband were given permission to visit the nine-months-old child any time they wish.

It was a happy ending to a bitter court battle between the actress and the Levys, who had charged Miss Shouel with abandonment.

Seven Jews Die In Border Clash

TEL AVIV, Israel, April 4 (AP) — Seven Jewish policemen were killed and three other wounded today in a clash on the Israeli-Syrian border, an Israeli government spokesman said tonight.

The spokesman accused Syrian military forces of penetrating a portion of the demilitarized border area southeast of the Lake of Tiberias (Sea of Galilee) that is under Israel's sovereignty.

He said seven Israeli policemen were killed and another wounded when a truck in which they were riding was attacked and captured by Syrian forces. The other two Israeli policemen wounded, he said, were in a second truck.

The incident is the "most flagrant violation of the Israeli-Syrian armistice so far," the spokesman said.

Mormon Church President Dies

SALT LAKE CITY, April 4 (AP)—George Albert Smith (above), slender grey-bearded president of the Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) Church, died today on his 81st birthday.

Death came at 7:27 p. m. It followed several weeks of serious illness which began when the church leader was stricken with a virus infection during the winter.

The spiritual leader of more than a million Mormons, President Smith had headed the church not quite six years. He became President May 21, 1945, a week after the death of his predecessor, Heber J. Grant.

Resale Of Army Surplus Trucks Netted $425,000

Vehicles Bought For $200, Sold For $3,900

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP) — House investigators learned today of a $1,270,000 deal in which Army surplus trucks were bought for as little as $200 and sold back to the government for as much as $3,900 apiece.

Chicago Truck Dealer Morris Green said he and associates netted $425,000 from the resale of 1,000 surplus trucks they bought in the Philippines.

Green said, however, that they had to pay out some $325,000 in fees, legal costs and commissions, including:

$127,000 to the Schnitzer Bros Steel Company of Portland, Ore., which tipped them off that the Atomic Energy Commission was in the market for heavy duty trucks.

$42,000 To Freeman Estate

$42,000 in an out-of-court settlement to the estate of Joseph Freeman of Los Angeles. Green said he later learned Freeman had been "mixed up with the Garsson-May deal, or something like that."

Joseph F. Freeman was indicted on bribe conspiracy charges in 1947 with former Rep. Andrew J. May of Kentucky and Munitions Manufacturers Henry and Murray Garsson.

May and the Garssons were convicted and served prison terms. Freeman won a directed verdict of acquittal.

Nothing Illegal Implied

Green's testimony today was before an Executive Expenditures subcommittee, which is looking into high-profit deals in military surplus goods left in the Philippines and in Western Germany after World War Two.

Chairman Bonner (D-NC) announced that the committee has not implied anything illegal about such transactions.

"But what develops in the hearings will be another matter," Bonner said.

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The United States charged today that Russia's real aim in the Paris Big Four talks is to destroy West German participation in the defense system being built by the Western Powers against "the threat of Soviet Communist aggression."

"If the Russians should be successful in achieving this," a statement broadcast by the Voice of America said, "they would have removed a potential barrier to the Communist takeover of Western Europe."

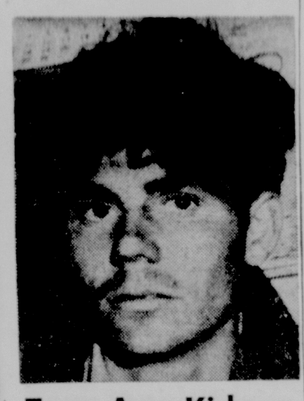
The statement, released by the State Department in an unusual step, declared that the U. S. is anxious to arrange for a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers, which is the purpose of the Paris talks.

But it made officially and emphatically clear that this government will not agree to any "trick wording" by which the Kremlin seeks to outwit the West and forestall the development of an adequate defense force.

(In Paris, Russia made some concessions toward a foreign ministers' agenda at a meeting of the Big Four deputies today. The three western powers said the concessions, presented in a new draft proposal, did not go far enough.)

26 Jews Hurt In Riot

SALZBURG, Austria, April 4 (AP)—Twenty-six Jews were injured tonight in a 90-minute riot during which displaced persons, police, and a hostile Austrian crowd clashed, Jewish community leaders reported.



Teen-Age Kidnap Victim Rescued; Ex-Convict Held

Plucky Jackie Parris, 16, smiles wanly at her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Parris (left) at McAlester, Okla., after 50 hours of terror with a kidnaper who she said assaulted her two hours before rescue by a posse. She was found huddled next to a fire under a rock ledge. Across from her sat Robert Phillips (above), 23, who gave up without a struggle. Authorities said last night they are preparing kidnap charges against Phillips, an ex-convict.

Posse Rescues Kidnaped Girl; Ex-Convict Held

Teen-Ager Attacked Two Hours Earlier

McALESTER, Okla., April 4 (AP) — A 16-year-old high school girl, threatened with death during a 50-hour terror trip, was rescued by a posse today two hours after she said she was raped by her abductor.

Jackie Parris was found huddled next to a fire under a rock ledge 35 miles from here at 1 a.m. Across from her, tired and unkempt, sat Robert Phillips, 23, who gave up to a posse without a struggle.

Pittsburgh County officials said they are preparing kidnap charges against Phillips. County Attorney Wayne Russell of neighboring Latimer County, is to talk with the girl tomorrow to discuss possible filing of a rape charge in that county.

Threatened With Death

The attack allegedly occurred in a tin pipeline shack in the mountains of Latimer County.

The plucky, pretty little high school girl told her rescuers how she had been threatened with death in the rugged trip through the mountains of Eastern Oklahoma, once the hideout for western badmen.

The posse, led by Chester Palmer, Kinta sawmill operator, was attracted to the girl and Phillips by a blazing fire.

The 16-year-old girl and her date, Bill Coghill, 17, were abducted Sunday night after a man forced himself into their car outside a skating rink here.

Taken To Hospital

Coghill gained his freedom several hours later when their car was stuck in a creek south of Kinta and the abductor walked away with the girl.

Before she was taken to a McAlester hospital and put under a doctor's care, Jackie related her 50 hours of hunger, cold and finally her rape.

The girl told rescuers that several times Phillips threatened to kill her and take his own life. Jackie said she tried to persuade him to give up.

Catches Mumps At 99

QUINCY, Ill., April 4 (AP) — A person can't be lucky all the time, Mrs. Anna Pilatt feels.

As a girl she escaped most of the childhood diseases. Today she was laid up with the mumps. She will be 99 on Sept. 16.

Present Of Sight Is Given To Blind Seaman By Friend

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP) — One of the greatest of all gifts—sight—came today to a blind young seaman, a present from a brave and generous friend.

Bandages were taken off for the first time from the right eye of 24-year-old Philip Pron and doctors said he can see. It will be weeks before they know the full extent to which vision is restored, however.

But a little sight was enough for Pron.

"I am very happy," he said.

He has been blind for five years since an accident at sea. His right eye was undamaged, however, except for the cornea. A week ago a healthy cornea — the transparent membrane covering the front of the eye — was transplanted to the eye.

The cornea came from the blind right eye of Pron's good friend and fellow-patient, Eric Joseph, 27. He lost the sight of one eye when he was a prizefighter in England. But its cornea was sound.

Joseph met Pron in a Staten Island Marine hospital and offered his good cornea when he learned it might help his friend.

GIs-To-Europe Resolution Is Passed, 69-21

Approves Sending 4 Divisions To 'Ike'

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—The Senate gave full endorsement tonight to sending 100,000 American soldiers—four combat divisions and their supporting troops—to the defense of Western Europe.

But it called on President Truman to obtain the approval of Congress before ordering any more ground troops into the international army commanded by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

These are the cornerstones of the Senate's historic troops-for-Europe resolution by a vote of 69 to 21.

Action came on the second anniversary of the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty in Washington April 4, 1949.

It climaxed nearly three months of bitter debate about what contribution the United States should make in fighting men to help guard Western Europe against the possibility of Russian aggression.

Not Binding On President

The resolution expresses only the sense of the Senate. It is not legally binding upon the President, who claims full authority to deploy troops around the world but who has said he will consult Congress as a matter of courtesy.

Yet the opinion of the Senate will carry great weight at home and abroad.

Moreover, the Senate immediately approved 45 to 41, a concurrent, or two-house, resolution couched in much the same language. However the measure could not be sent immediately to the House for action there because supporters failed to nail down the result.

Sens. M-Clellan (D-Ark) and Knowland (R-Calif) tried to make the vote final by having the Senate act on a motion to reconsider, but Sen. McFarland of Arizona made the point of order that the Senate already had agreed to take up other business. In that situation any member who voted for the resolution, or who was absent at the time of the vote, may move within 48 hours to reconsider it.

Invitation To House

Approval of the second resolution was an invitation by the Senate to the House to join in expressing its opinion on the issues. Like the Senate measure, it would be merely advisory if endorsed by the house.

Forty-two Democrats and 27 Republicans voted for the Senate measure. Nineteen Republicans and two Democrats—Ellender of Louisiana and Fulbright of Arkansas—voted against it.

It required three days of argument and roll calls to reach the vote taken tonight.

Late today the senators handed the administration another setback by adopting an amendment saying consideration should be given to inviting Western Germany and Spain to join in the defense of Europe under the North Atlantic pact.

Sponsored by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis), the amendment was tacked on the end of the Senate resolution. Administration men and others fought the amendment on the ground it was neither the time nor place to consider such an invitation.

Advertising Tax Proposal Rapped

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) said today an excise tax on advertising—called "desirable" by the staff of a congressional committee he heads—would "involve great dangers."

The tax suggestion, advanced by the staff of the Senate-House Economic Committee, was criticized by Sen. Bricker (R-Ohio) and Sen. Benton (D-Conn.), a former advertising man and a member of the committee.

The proposal was set forth by the staff in its annual report, which was put out over the weekend together with the committee's own report.

"From a general economic point of view," the staff said, "one of the most desirable excise taxes that could be levied would be a tax on advertising, especially on that urging consumers to buy consumer goods.

"This is obviously not the time to whip up inflation further by stimulating consumer buying, nor is it the time for making still worse the already grave shortage of so vital and critical a material as newsprint or woodpulp.

"Yet, notwithstanding this, an increased volume of advertising continues to spur on to additional spending."

Patrol Rescues U. S. Prisoners

NORTH OF CHUNCHON, Korea, April 4 (AP) — The last four of 17 U. S. prisoners released by the Chinese Communists reached American lines today, thanks to a heroic patrol.

Eight other freed prisoners walked into Allied lines today. Five more were found two days ago.

The rescue patrol slipped five perilous miles into rugged enemy territory and brought out the last four of the group of 17.

Of the four abandoned by their captors, three were sick or wounded and unable to walk. The fourth healthy soldier had remained behind to care for them.

The 17 weary, bearded Second Division soldiers were captured by the Communists in the fighting around Hoengsong in Central Korea Feb. 11. Their names were not released.

Sgt. John Devos, Chicago, led a small patrol into enemy territory looking for the four.

Devos said the patrol came at last to a house in the hills.

"One GI came out of the house waving a white flag," he said. "The others were lying on the ground outside the house, too weak to move.

"I guess even those were lucky. They had been released a few miles to the north and goodness knows how they got down that far south even with the help of Korean civilians.

"They were so glad to see us it was pitiful to look at. One fellow had a hard time to keep from crying. One had a terrible case of gangrene. Another with his leg broken by a bullet said "I'm mighty proud to see American soldiers." Another had sold his watch and ring to buy a little food from the Koreans."

Baltimore Mayoralty Candidate Disqualified

BALTIMORE, April 4 (AP) — A Markland Kelly, independent candidate for mayor, was disqualified today by the Board of Supervisors of Elections.

The three-man board held that Kelly's petition containing signatures of 2,800 persons who backed him as a candidate did not comply with the law.

A city law states that a person who signs such a petition must also indicate the date to make the signature effective. The board found that petitions supporting Kelly only had a date at the top of several sheets, which contained some 30 signatures each.

Political dopesters said Kelly's elimination would make it harder for Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro to win re-election. They figured some voters who would have supported Kelly would now vote instead of Joseph L. Carter, Republican running against D'Alesandro. The general election is set for May 8.

PIE-EATING CHAMP—"Too fast to be fun" might be what Joe Griffith is mumbling from behind the chocolate filling, but in spite of the slightly green look, the 11-year-old won the pie-eating championship of the Washington, D. C., Boys' Club. He downed a quarter of a pie in 21 seconds for the title, plus three other hunks to get to the finals.

Twin Babies Saved From Blazing Home By Brother, Age 6

JOLIET, Ill., April 4 (AP)—Six-year-old Andrew Downs rescued his twin baby brothers from their blazing home yesterday.

The fire occurred in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Downs in Braceville, 25 miles south of Joliet. Mrs. Downs had gone to a grocery and left Andrew in charge of the year-old twins, Jerry and Gerald.

When she returned she found the building afire and Andrew standing in the yard with both babies in his arms. The boy said he did not know how the fire started but that he carried both infants out together.

Pair Robs Ohio Bank, Escapes With $4,969

LOWER SALEM, O., April 4 (AP)—Two bandits trussed up three employes of the Lower Salem Commercial Bank in this Washington County community near Marietta today and escaped with $4,969.

The State Highway Patrol at Marietta set the loss at $4,969. Earlier it was believed the men got only $2,000 in the 15-minute holdup.

Md. Election Probers Ignore GOP Demands

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Republicans continued to insist today that the investigation of the 1950 Maryland senatorial campaign should be wound up quickly, but senators conducting the inquiry ignored such demands.

Chairman Monroney (D-Okla) said his elections subcommittee wants to complete the study as soon as possible but wishes to be sure that all "material evidence" is placed in the record before writing a report. Hearings have been going on since Feb. 20.

Sen. Butler (R-Md), who defeated the veteran Democrat Millard E. Tydings last November, wants the Senate Republican Policy Committee to hear him or a spokesman in a move to have the subcommittee "fish or cut bait."

Sen. Taft of Ohio told a reporter last night that the subcommittee has turned up nothing so far that would warrant a contest to unseat Butler.

Israel Election July 30

TEL AVIV, Israel, April 4 (AP) — The Israeli Parliament today set July 30 as the date for general elections.

Truman Friend Named In RFC Probe Resigns

ST. LOUIS, April 4 (AP)—James P. Finnegan, a close friend of President Truman, announced today he was resigning as internal revenue collector here.

Finnegan was mentioned in a recent Senate investigation of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., but he said that had nothing to do with his decision to resign.

He explained he was quitting, effective April 14, to resume his law practice, a move he had been contemplating for two years.

Singer Peggy Lee To File For Divorce

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP)—Blonde Songstress Peggy Lee and her composer-husband, Dave Barbour, have decided on a divorce, their press representative said today.

Miss Lee expects to file in Las Vegas, Nev., sometime in May, said their agent, Fran Jackson.

The couple has been married nine years and has a daughter, Nicki, 7.

Miss Jackson said the marriage has been cooling for "a long period of time."

'They Didn't Like Me,' Farm Youth Says After Killing 4

CONWAY, Mo., April 4 (AP) — "They were good neighbors, but they didn't like me."

That statement by a 23-year-old youth is the nearest thing to a motive uncovered in their investigation of the fatal shooting of four members of an Ozark farm family last night, authorities said today.

Prosecuting Attorney John Hosmer and Sheriff E. I. Cunningham of Webster County said Kenneth Essary had admitted the slayings. Hosmer said first degree murder charges would be filed.

Essary was arrested early today at his father's home a few hours after four of the youth's neighbors were shot to death at their farm southeast of here in the Ozark hill country.

The victims were William Shockley, 43; his wife, Clara, 44; their daughter, Helen Louise, 16 and Shockley's mother, Mrs. Gus Shockley, 73.

Hosmer quoted the youth as saying he always "got along" with the Shockleys, who lived about an eighth of a mile from his rented farm. Essary was being held in the jail at Marshfield, Webster County seat, and was to be questioned further.

The shy youth's shooting spree last night could have claimed more lives, but his shots missed their marks, Cunningham and Hosmer said. He fired into an upstairs room occupied by five Shockley children and blazed away when six relatives of the slain people rushed to the scene. Another child, 10-month-old Robert Shockley, was found asleep between the bodies of his mother and grandmother.

Civil Defense Meeting Called By Caldwell

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Civil Defense Administration Millard Caldwell today invited leaders of more than 400 national organizations to meet here May 7-8 to discuss education of the public on the "means for survival in the event of attack."

In a statement, Caldwell said there is need for a nationwide, unprecedented effort of education on civil defense. Hhe said:

"The greatest and most immediate enemy of the American public is apathy toward its own danger."

Wave Kit Made Hair Fall Out; Woman Sues

BALTIMORE, April 4 (AP)—Mrs. Ruth Ballenger, Washington, filed a $15,000 damage suit in federal district court here today against the Lever Brothers Co., manufacturer of a hair preparation which she said made her hair fall out.

Mrs. Ballenger said in her suit that the home permanent wave preparation was made of "certain inherent dangerous acids, or alkalines, or other chemicals" which caused a "serious and permanent injury to her health."

The rescue patrol slipped five perilous miles into rugged enemy territory and brought out the last four of the group of 17.

Of the four abandoned by their captors, three were sick or wounded and unable to walk. The fourth healthy soldier had remained behind to care for them.

The 17 weary, bearded Second Division soldiers were captured by the Communists in the fighting around Hoengsong in Central Korea Feb. 11. Their names were not released.

Sgt. John Devos, Chicago, led a small patrol into enemy territory looking for the four.

Devos said the patrol came at last to a house in the hills.

"One GI came out of the house waving a white flag," he said. "The others were lying on the ground outside the house, too weak to move.

"I guess even those were lucky. They had been released a few miles to the north and goodness knows how they got down that far south even with the help of Korean civilians.

"They were so glad to see us it was pitiful to look at. One fellow had a hard time to keep from crying. One had a terrible case of gangrene. Another with his leg broken by a bullet said "I'm mighty proud to see American soldiers." Another had sold his watch and ring to buy a little food from the Koreans."

Baltimore Mayoralty Candidate Disqualified

BALTIMORE, April 4 (AP) — A Markland Kelly, independent candidate for mayor, was disqualified today by the Board of Supervisors of Elections.

The three-man board held that Kelly's petition containing signatures of 2,800 persons who backed him as a candidate did not comply with the law.

A city law states that a person who signs such a petition must also indicate the date to make the signature effective. The board found that petitions supporting Kelly only had a date at the top of several sheets, which contained some 30 signatures each.

Political dopesters said Kelly's elimination would make it harder for Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro to win re-election. They figured some voters who would have supported Kelly would now vote instead of Joseph L. Carter, Republican running against D'Alesandro. The general election is set for May 8.

PIE-EATING CHAMP—"Too fast to be fun" might be what Joe Griffith is mumbling from behind the chocolate filling, but in spite of the slightly green look, the 11-year-old won the pie-eating championship of the Washington, D. C., Boys' Club. He downed a quarter of a pie in 21 seconds for the title, plus three other hunks to get to the finals.

Twin Babies Saved From Blazing Home By Brother, Age 6

JOLIET, Ill., April 4 (AP)—Six-year-old Andrew Downs rescued his twin baby brothers from their blazing home yesterday.

The fire occurred in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Downs in Braceville, 25 miles south of Joliet. Mrs. Downs had gone to a grocery and left Andrew in charge of the year-old twins, Jerry and Gerald.

When she returned she found the building afire and Andrew standing in the yard with both babies in his arms. The boy said he did not know how the fire started but that he carried both infants out together.

Pair Robs Ohio Bank, Escapes With $4,969

LOWER SALEM, O., April 4 (AP)—Two bandits trussed up three employes of the Lower Salem Commercial Bank in this Washington County community near Marietta today and escaped with $4,969.

The State Highway Patrol at Marietta set the loss at $4,969. Earlier it was believed the men got only $2,000 in the 15-minute holdup.

Md. Election Probers Ignore GOP Demands

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Republicans continued to insist today that the investigation of the 1950 Maryland senatorial campaign should be wound up quickly, but senators conducting the inquiry ignored such demands.

Chairman Monroney (D-Okla) said his elections subcommittee wants to complete the study as soon as possible but wishes to be sure that all "material evidence" is placed in the record before writing a report. Hearings have been going on since Feb. 20.

Sen. Butler (R-Md), who defeated the veteran Democrat Millard E. Tydings last November, wants the Senate Republican Policy Committee to hear him or a spokesman in a move to have the subcommittee "fish or cut bait."

Sen. Taft of Ohio told a reporter last night that the subcommittee has turned up nothing so far that would warrant a contest to unseat Butler.

Israel Election July 30

TEL AVIV, Israel, April 4 (AP) — The Israeli Parliament today set July 30 as the date for general elections.

Truman Friend Named In RFC Probe Resigns

ST. LOUIS, April 4 (AP)—James P. Finnegan, a close friend of President Truman, announced today he was resigning as internal revenue collector here.

Finnegan was mentioned in a recent Senate investigation of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., but he said that had nothing to do with his decision to resign.

He explained he was quitting, effective April 14, to resume his law practice, a move he had been contemplating for two years.

Singer Peggy Lee To File For Divorce

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP)—Blonde Songstress Peggy Lee and her composer-husband, Dave Barbour, have decided on a divorce, their press representative said today.

Miss Lee expects to file in Las Vegas, Nev., sometime in May, said their agent, Fran Jackson.

The couple has been married nine years and has a daughter, Nicki, 7.

Miss Jackson said the marriage has been cooling for "a long period of time."

'They Didn't Like Me,' Farm Youth Says After Killing 4

CONWAY, Mo., April 4 (AP) — "They were good neighbors, but they didn't like me."

That statement by a 23-year-old youth is the nearest thing to a motive uncovered in their investigation of the fatal shooting of four members of an Ozark farm family last night, authorities said today.

Prosecuting Attorney John Hosmer and Sheriff E. I. Cunningham of Webster County said Kenneth Essary had admitted the slayings. Hosmer said first degree murder charges would be filed.

Essary was arrested early today at his father's home a few hours after four of the youth's neighbors were shot to death at their farm southeast of here in the Ozark hill country.

The victims were William Shockley, 43; his wife, Clara, 44; their daughter, Helen Louise, 16 and Shockley's mother, Mrs. Gus Shockley, 73.

Hosmer quoted the youth as saying he always "got along" with the Shockleys, who lived about an eighth of a mile from his rented farm. Essary was being held in the jail at Marshfield, Webster County seat, and was to be questioned further.

The shy youth's shooting spree last night could have claimed more lives, but his shots missed their marks, Cunningham and Hosmer said. He fired into an upstairs room occupied by five Shockley children and blazed away when six relatives of the slain people rushed to the scene. Another child, 10-month-old Robert Shockley, was found asleep between the bodies of his mother and grandmother.

Civil Defense Meeting Called By Caldwell

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Civil Defense Administration Millard Caldwell today invited leaders of more than 400 national organizations to meet here May 7-8 to discuss education of the public on the "means for survival in the event of attack."

In a statement, Caldwell said there is need for a nationwide, unprecedented effort of education on civil defense. Hhe said:

"The greatest and most immediate enemy of the American public is apathy toward its own danger."

Wave Kit Made Hair Fall Out; Woman Sues

BALTIMORE, April 4 (AP)—Mrs. Ruth Ballenger, Washington, filed a $15,000 damage suit in federal district court here today against the Lever Brothers Co., manufacturer of a hair preparation which she said made her hair fall out.

Mrs. Ballenger said in her suit that the home permanent wave preparation was made of "certain inherent dangerous acids, or alkalines, or other chemicals" which caused a "serious and permanent injury to her health."

Man Lives Over 2 Months Without Pituitary Gland

By RENNIE TAYLOR

SAN FRANCISCO—(AP)—For the first time in medical history a human being lived for more than two months without his pituitary gland, University of California scientists reported.

A husky 32-year-old bachelor with a supposedly hopeless case of cancer underwent an operation for removal of the gland Jan. 24, knowing he might die of it. He died Monday.

The operation was performed at the laboratory of oncology here by Dr. Edward Boldery, University of California nerve surgeon, to test the belief of some doctors that it might slow the malignant growth.

The cancer did not slow down, said Dr.. Michael Shimkin, laboratory director.

After the operation he assumed a "vegetative existence," functioning for the remainder of his life in some respects more like a plant than a human being.

He was kept alive for more than 60 days by injections of ACTH, one of the hormones normally secreted by the pituitary.

Medical records do not show a comparable case where a human has lived that long after being deprived of this gland.

Dr. Shimkin said there have been numerous successful removals of pituitary tumors, in which much or perhaps all of the gland was removed. He said this was the first successful removal of a normal pituitary gland of which he was aware.

The man died of a rapidly progressive malignant growth at approximately the time doctors had expected, Dr. Shimkin said. There was no connection between the pituitary operation and the patient's death.

There are two other cases in the medical records of attempts to remove the gland from humans. Attempts also have been made to destroy the gland by x-rays but without success. Both surgery cases died. However, animals have been kept alive after pituitary removal, but never for very long.

The pituitary is the boss gland of the body. It is about the size of a hazlenut and lies at the base of the brain.

This amazing little lump secretes different hormones which in turn control other important glands. These other glands regulate sex functions, blood pressure, digestion and other body actions.

Even though the operation does not affect the patient's cancer, medical science stands to learn something more about the amazing powers of this gland as the result of the operation. Its secretions may contain other hormones not yet isolated.

RESCUED from Communist kidnappers, Johanna Buechner, 30-year-old ex-secretary of the East German Minister of Industry, reads the story of her escape in a West Berlin newspaper. Miss Buechner was being taken in a motor car from her Dresden home to the Soviet secret police headquarters in Berlin. Her screams attracted Allied Sector police, who halted the car and arrested the driver. (International)

Sensitive Robot Nose Developed To Detect Fumes

BOSTON (INS)—Rudolf the red-nosed reindeer finds his popularity threatened today by a mechanical "nose" whose function is to detect all odors and gases.

This robot "smeller—a potential life-saver—can measure odors and gases in concentrations of less than one hundredth part in a million parts of air.

The highly-sensitive nose, whose detecting range runs from industrial fumes to the deadly new military "nerve gases", was described to the American Chemical Society meeting in Boston by two Danbury, Conn., researchers.

Dr. Amos Turk, director of research and development, and Henry Sleik of the W. B. Connon Engineering Corp., said the nose machine was designed with a motor-driven blower which collects large volumes of contaminated air quickly and removes contaminants by the same method employed in gas masks.

The researchers said that through use of radioactive tracers and Geiger counters, the machine can be used in industrial areas to determine where contamination is occuring.

Earl P. Stevenson, a Cambridge, Mass., chemical engineer, suggested to the nation's chemists that America place mustard gas on a production basis equal to that of any major product of the chemical industry.

He said that poison gas "offers a uniquely suitable weapon" in the present world crisis. He declared that gas must be reckoned with in the rearmament program and cited an Army report that other nations have been experimenting with new forms of toxic chemical warfare.

Cloud Over Iran

The next several weeks should tell whether current happenings in Iran are merely another Soviet war of nerves or the real thing. Early in March the premier and the education minister were assassinated, assassination attempts on other high officials were reported, riots broke out in the oil fields following a general strike, the capital was placed under martial law. Russia can count on a fervid nationalist movement in Iran to muddy the waters.

The Iranian parliament (Majlis) has voted to nationalize the nation's oil deposits, presumably by expropriation, within several months. And this although the British have offered to increase to 50 per cent the royalty they pay Iran for oil taken out. A stoppage of any length of time in the oil from Iran would probably impel the United States to divert some of its own oil supplies to Great Britain to keep the defense program against Soviet aggression in high gear.

The rich oil fields of southern Iran are British-owned (Anglo-Iranian Oil Co.). So the United States would find it awkward to intervene in Iran, in the absence of actual Soviet penetration, in a dispute about nationalizing the oil. Moreover, the British Socialist Government stands for nationalization of all natural resources and key industries, even if not by expropriation nor in disregard of treaties.

When Russia withdrew its troops from Iranian soil in 1946, under UN pressure, it received from the government at Teheran a concession to certain Iranian oil fields. But the Iranian parliament, in what Moscow calls an act of the blackest perfidy, refused to ratify the treaty for the concession.

Russia and Iran ratified a treaty in 1921 whereby Russian troops may enter Iran if necessary to protect it from aggression by a third nation or to prevent Iran from becoming a base for military action against Russia. Teheran says the treaty is no longer valid, Moscow says it is.

Communist Bookkeeping

Russia is telling the world that military expenditures in her "peace budget" total only $24,000,000,000 compared to $71,000,000,000 for the same items in the "war budget" of the United States. Russia is using trick bookkeeping to hide the fact that her arms effort exceeds those of other nations.

To say, for instance, that the United States is spending a larger percentage of its federal budget than Russia is on arms is deliberately misleading. This country has large state and local budgets compared to Russia. The federal budget of the United States is 25 per cent of national income. Russia's is 85 per cent of hers.

Russia is getting more armament for her money than the United States is. Russia pays soldiers $7.50 a month; the U. S. pays $75 and up. Russia has 15,000,000 slave laborers and provides them with subminimum standards of food, clothing and housing. If they were paid what American workers receive in defense industries, Russia's budget total would total many billions more.

Part of this country's "war budget" is for pensions and other benefits to veterans of the last war. No such item is included in the Russian budget. Another large item is economic and military aid to other countries. Russia includes no comparable item. All steel plants, canals, power stations and other expanded developments for military purposes are similarly omitted from Russia's military budget—but not from that of the U. S.

Summing up, it is revealed that Russia is spending more than 20 per cent of her national income on arms, while the West is spending 15 per cent. Russia is still leading the world in war preparations, unfortunately.

A Justice Dissents

Members of the United States Supreme Court have had television dumped right in their laps. They must decide whether the Federal Communications Commission exceeded its power in approving Columbia's color system over that of the Radio Corporation of America. But just what has to be cleared up? Several of the justices didn't hesitate to ask opposing lawyers what the issues were.

Justice Jackson asked, "Must we decide which system is technically superior? Or which is the better investment? I know nothing about TV sets—couldn't set one up if I had one." Justice Frankfurter chimed in, "Nobody knows less than I do about it." And Jackson said, "I dissent from that statement!"

The lawyers, of course, were quite sure about the issues as seen from their corners. The complexities of color TV roll over laymen, too, leaving them with the simple but profound feeling that umpiring this new development is like trying to umpire the coming of spring's colors. Winter may be loath to let the sap rise and the leaves grow—but spring has even more power this time of year. Who can doubt that color TV, like spring, will not wait too long on the courts of men?

Perhaps nobody knows that better than the justices of the Supreme Court. Perhaps this realization made them even more humble than usual in the knowledge they don't have the final answers to anything, but can only do their best as guides through the woods of human affairs.

"Beefleggers" Again

"Beefleggers"—rustlers who pick up a critter here and there and frequently slaughter them on the spot—are making their appearance again on the western ranges. Their operations were quite extensive during and immediately following the last war.

Operating in trucks instead of on horseback, these thieves are highly mobile and may be in an adjacent state before their depredations are discovered. The high price of beef makes their operations highly profitable, although the risk involved is great. Long penitentiary sentences are the fate of all rustlers who are caught.

In Lander, Wyo., the sheriff has organized a rustler patrol of half a dozen deputies to take to the trail of rustlers. More than 100 beef cattle have disappeared from one section of the county alone in recent weeks.

With the value of beef cattle averaging more than $250 on the range the former tendency to overlook a minor "discrepancy" in the tally has disappeared. When a single critter disappears the law now is alerted.

How To Keep Well

How's Your Incision?

SEVERAL years ago a medical classmate of mine announced at a mixed party that he was going to show everyone his appendectomy scar. When he took off his coat the women became embarrassed and the men wondered if he had indulged too freely. He rolled up his right sleeve and there was a scar on his forearm. Several years before this chap's right arm had been burned severely. Plastic surgery was needed and skin was grafted from the lowed abdomen to the denuded area on his arm. The appendectomy scar was included in the graft.

The abdominal scar was not too bad or too good. It was wide and rough because his appendix had ruptured and the incision became infected. This was before the days of penicillin and he was lucky to have survived. He never dreamed that the scar would land on his arm but this did not bother him because he had no aspirations to become a chorus girl on fan dancer.

Modern surgeons give their patients a better break. More and more incisions close in a thin, colorless line because they are permitted to heal under ideal conditions. One factor that encourages healthy repair is good nutrition and few individuals now come to surgery in a state of malnutrition. Moreover, the surgeon insists that the patient resume eating as soon as possible after the operation because food is needed for tissue building and proteins and vitamin C are essential along this line.

Gaseous distention of the abdomen may interfere with healing. When severe, it stretches the skin and separates the wound edges. This may be unavoidable even under the best care but surgeons are working on the problem and we hear of more and more individuals who undergo surgery without this uncomfortable aftermath. Stomach tubes and medicines help to keep the intestine in tone. Another valuable measure is keeping infection in tow with the wonder drugs as a stitch abscess or infected wound may mar an otherwise neat sewing job. But good surgical technic also is important in preventing complications. The original bandage is not removed until the stitches are ready to be taken out. This plan decreases the chances of wound contamination. The original bandage was applied in the operating room where everyone was wearing gowns, masks, caps, and gloves. So long as the lesion is not proving bothersome it need not be disturbed. The lesson to be learned is not to become curious and peek or poke around or demand that the dressing be changed.

Coughing is another bugaboo in the healing stage of incisions although good suture material and strong binders help along this line. If a respiratory disease develops, the antibiotics come to the rescue. But it is better to cough, even at the risk of opening the wound, rather than permit the air passageways to become blocked.

In ye olde days it was common practice for the surgeon to insert a gauze or rubber drain into the abdomen to permit pus to escape should abscess develop. But the drain was irritating and interfered with healing. Better scars also are obtained by cutting with the grain and not crossing a line created by a body creases. This is ideal but not always feasible. Nevertheless, it relieves tension, permits healing to occur more easily, looks better, and there is less scar formation. No one likes a huge incision but the original opening should be large enough to do the operation properly.

SIZE OF PUPILS

V. T. writes: What causes a narnow pupil and a wide pupil?

REPLY

The pupil of the eye is like the shutter on a camera. When more light is needed, as on a dark day, the opening enlarges, and vice versa. I'm assuming you are referring to pupils of the eyes and not to those in the classroom, where some are "narrow" and others are "wide."

NUMB FACE

M. G. writes: I have periods in which my face feels wooden. It used to come only after an upset but now it appears for no reason at all. What causes this feeling?

REPLY

Not having had a wooden face, I hardly know what you mean. If you refer to puffiness, there are many causes including allergy, kidney disease, and circulatory disturbances. If numbness is the difficulty, a disturbance of the facial nerves is a possibility. Occasionally an infected tooth or enlarged gland makes the face feel tight.

YAWNING

C. T. writes: I have been yawing 25 times a day for eight years. I also have angina pectoris. Are yawning and heart disease related?

REPLY

There is a remote possibility that a relationship exists but in your case it is questionable because the gaping tendency has existed for so long. Yawning is noted occasionally when the heart is in a state of failure; it is a manifestation of shotness of breath. The symptoms of angina pectoris are different. Could it be that you have been tired for eight years, or bored?

Chester, New Jersey, Adopts Kumrovec, Town In Yugoslavia; People There Are Vigorously Pro-American; G.I.'s Hit By Increased Living Costs

WASHINGTON—Four brief years ago an American plane flying along the Yugoslav-Austrian border was shot down by trigger-happy Yugoslav troops. Tempers flared diplomats protested, ill feeling between the United States and the most powerful nation in the Balkans reached a dangerous climax.

Today, in contrast, the small farming town of Chester, New Jersey, is adopting the Yugoslav town of Kumrovec, which happens to be the birthplace of Marshal Tito.

There is nothing official about this adoption ceremony. It was worked out not by the governments of either country, but through an exchange of messages between its citizens, in which 300 Chester school kids participated.

Most interesting thing about Kumrovec is that, though the birthplace of Tito, it's getting quite sick of communism and is vigorously pro-American. Gaston Coblentz, Belgrade correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, describes the town as "a lovely picturesque place in the Croatian hills, but the atmosphere is far from gay. The peasants are clinging to their land. All but two of the village families have defied local authorities by refusing to join a Red collective.

"The 250 families of Kumrovec are happy about their new tie with the United States; it signifies to them that a beneficient American influence may be exercised on the Communist government."

When I was in Yugoslavia recently, I found the Yugoslav people vigorously pro-American, violently anti-Russian. What is happening is that the United States long has maintained it did not care what kind of government another country had as long as it did not try to force its type of government on the rest of the world.

The people of Yugoslavia are now taking us up on this, and today's ceremony at Chester, N. J., is one indication.

G. I. Gripe Bag

In order to help enlisted men with their many problems, this column will publish from time to time excerpts from G. I. letters received, and the answers. Names are not published without permission:

"A Bunch of Sailors," Naval Station, San Diego, Calif.—"We feel a grave injustice is being done to us, and indirectly to our families, by the recent increases in clothing prices. The ship's store now charges more than double for most articles, whereas our standard maintenance allowance has been increased less than 50 per cent."

Answer—You are absolutely right that the cost of living has shot up in the Navy, so that enlisted men must now pay $39.65 for the same overcoat that sold for $17.50 before Korea, $20 for a blanket that previously sold for $7.50 and $16.50 for a jumper that used to sell for $6.70. This column has found that Navy clothing prices have increased from 127 to 146 per cent. Yet the monthly clothing allowance for enlisted men has been increased only 20 to 71 per cent, depending upon rank. The real blame, however, rests with the White House for not ordering inflation controls early enough. For, the truth is, the cost to the Navy of basic fabrics has shot up higher than the prices charged in the ship's store.

Lloyd Hoppes, Wabash, Indiana—"I am 20 years old, and I am also married. I went to see the recruiting officer today, and he told me that married men could not enlist in the Army. We want to help our country just as much as the single men."

Answer—Paradoxically it is true that at the same time the Army is crying for more manpower, it will not enlist married men below the grade of sergeant, though it will draft them. This is something the Army ought to explain to Congress. But if you wait around long enough, you may be drafted and still get a chance to serve.

A Noncommissioned Officer, Keesler Air Base, Miss.—"On Saturday, March 10, the NCO's were told if they did not become members of the NCO club by midnight, they would be restricted to the field. Yet an Air Force regulation plainly states that membership in an NCO club will be voluntary."

Answer—Brig. Gen. J. F. Powell, Keesler's commanding officer, admitted to this column that nonjoiners were restricted on the technicality that they hadn't paid up their debts. He explained that all non-commissioned officers "automatcially" belong to the NCO club, therefore those who hadn't paid their dues were restricted. However, he claimed that any NCO could have got out of this punishment by writing a "letter of resignation" from the club. This still smacks of intimidation and coercion to push the NCO's into a club which they weren't required to join. The real reason, this column has learned, was to collect the $1 membership fees sorely needed since the slot machines were abolished. This cut out the club's main revenue.

Allen Davidson, Quincy, Florida—"My uncle, Sergeant Jesse Ferguson, was wounded in Korea. During the retreat from North Korea, he got lost from his outfit for 17 days, and was found with his hands and feet frozen. He was flown to a Hospital in Japan and kept off his feet for one month. He is now back in Korea. I understand that once you get your hands and feet frozen, you should never let them get cold again. Why does the Army send combat men back to Korea who have had frozen hands or feet?"

Answer — Only light frostbite cases, which have fully recovered, are allowed to be sent back to combat. If Sergeant Ferguson was frozen so severely that he had to be hospitalized for a month, he should not have been returned to Korea. This column has asked the Army for a complete investigation.

A Corporal, Somewhere in Korea —"I don't like to complain, but our rations are so low that the men are always hungry."

Answer—There is no food shortage in Korea. The Army supplies plenty of tinned foods for a normal daily diet, also does its best to deliver enough fresh food to each unit for at least one hot meal per day. However, under battle conditions, occasionally supplies are delayed or diverted. This has happened in isolated instances.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Larry Parks Story

A CONGRESSIONAL committee which sets out to investigate a witness should complete its job or announce to the public that it has not completed the investigation. Otherwise, it betrays its trust and it places the witness in a false light. It does not take full advantage of his appearance before it and at the same time, it gives to the public the impression that his answers were inadequate.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities, which under the chairmanship of Martin Dies and J. Parnell Thomas served this country well, in spite of all left-wing criticisms, has proved itself to be inadequate during the past two years, under the chairmanship of John S. Wood.

Take, for instance, the investigation of Larry Parks. He appeared before the committee in executive session and answered all the questions that were asked of him. As far as it went, his testimony was adequate. He confessed to his own Communist participation; he named names where asked to do so. This is tough doing, when one works in an industry which is overanxious to protect the property value of advertised names, no matter what the owners of those names have done to damage their country.

Just as Parks' testimony was becoming important, a bell rang calling the members of the House of Representatives to a roll-call. Such a routine does not take long and the committee could have and should have resumed its hearing.

Instead, Parks was excused and the committee never called him back to an executive session. He was never asked essential questions leading to the present situation. He was never given an opportunity to explain positions which he and his colleagues took subsequent to 1945 when our alliance with Soviet Russia terminated.

The injustice is as great to him as it is to the people of the United States. Those who have read reports of the public session of the committee, at which Parks appeared, are naturally of the opinion that all he tried to do was to square himself by a pathetic recital of his background. What they do not know is that the House Committee on Un-American Activities failed to get the most information out of a witness and that when they had a friendly witness before them who was willing to testify, they shut him off because a bell rang.

This committee is coasting along on the great work done by Martin Dies, Robert Stripling, J. B. Matthews, J. Parnell Thomas and Richard Dixon. It is not doing a comparable service. It is a lazy, inadequate committee that submits to pressures by the Department of Justice, which is apparently seeking to prevent a second Alger Hiss case from developing.

A committee of Congress should be absolutely independent of the executive branch of government. It is not expected to recognize the political necessities or to respect

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

The Weak Spot

FRANKFURT

PERHAPS it is wrong to try to find a pattern in all the strange, unnumbered signs and symptoms that mark the face of Europe in this critical, bleak spring of 1951. At first glance, for example, the behavior of Andrei Gromyko at Paris seems to have no connection with the increase in Soviet stocks of aviation gas in Eastern Germany. Yet after a month of intensive inquiry in Germany, this reporter would hazard a guess that an underlying pattern is there.

Indeed, this pattern was actually forcast as long ago as last spring in London by one of the greatest British wartime leaders, who is especially well qualified to judge the balance of military and other power between East and West. He was explaining that if the Western allies did not soon begin to see to their own defenses, they must expect disaster. Being reminded of the great Soviet superiority in all conventional weapons, he took up the central question—whether the Kremlin would permit the weakened West to rearm.

"You know," he said reflectively, "there will certainly be two or three very bad years when they are strong and we are only growing strong. It will be a very tricky time and we shall just have to get through it on nerve and the atomic bomb." He paused for a few moments, as though to consider the question, then resumed: "I am convinced that the Western lead in the atomic field is good enough, or at any rate can be good enough, to prevent a Soviet attack. To tell you the truth, I am much less worried about the atomic bomb than I am about our nerve."

Simple To Summarize

This "tricky time" has now begun, and all the evidence suggests that this wise Englishman foresaw the main difficulty very clearly. The essential features of the existing situation can, in fact, be very simply summarized.

First, the effort of rebuilding Western power is in itself disagreeable and in some aspects politically unpopular. The task of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, to construct a solid defense of Western Europe, is especially complex and troublesome, because it necessarily involves bringing additional American troops to Europe, which is disliked in the United States, and creating German armed contingents, which is disliked in Europe.

Second, in order to frustrate the whole plan for Western rearmament, the Kremlin needs only to block a part of it. Half enough divisions will not be much better than one-tenth enough or one-quarter enough, when the accumulation of a Soviet atomic stockpile cancels out the deterrent effect of our existing lead in atomic weapons. The Kremlin, having noted this vital fact, has set out to frustrate the Western defense effort by preventing any German contribution to it.

Third, the so-called atomic lead of the Western nations is really all that prevents a Kremlin aggression in Europe tomorrow. But the Europeans, seeing the great power of the Soviet army, deeply conscious of their own weakness, are hardly aware of the invisible protection of the atomic deterrent. Thus they tend to forget the basic rules, that an imperialist dictatorship attacks when it thinks it can win, that this kind of government cannot be goaded into attack by provocation, and that it cannot be dissuaded from attack by sweetness. Hence, there is a natural desire, in the Western European governments as well as among the peoples, to avoid doing what is regarded as "provocative," such as recreating German armed contingents.

Keeping Nerve Is Vital

It is precisely this situation which the Kremlin has now set out to exploit. Here in Germany, you find exceedingly shrewd officials who expect the Soviet armies in Eastern Europe to be reinforced by about two corps, one of armor and one of artillery, in early May. But these same officials do not say the purpose will be to overrun Western Europe the next morning. On the contrary, they say most emphatically that the only immediate purpose will be to inspire terror and the loss of nerve that the wise Englishman indicated he feared.

If the Soviet threats, empty although they probably are at this time should carry conviction in Paris or in London, then there will be a break in the Western alliance, probably when the Foreign Ministers meet. If this happens in turn, the ally whose nerve breaks will seek to barter off the German contribution to Eastern defense or perhaps some other essential feature of the Western defense plan, against some such empty concession as to temporary reduction of the number of Soviet divisions in Eastern Germany. That way, the Kremlin will be sure to win in the long run.

Furthermore, if the Western alliance is thus split this summer—and our Congress seems at the moment to be working as hard for it as the Kremlin—there will be other, more immediate consequences. For instance, if the West is divided and paralyzed, the odds on an early attack on Yugoslavia will change from less than even to somewhere close to nine to five in favor. There is no better way to tempt the Kremlin onwards than to seem to lose nerve.

Fortunately, so far as the transactions in Paris can be judged from here, there seems to have been no loss of nerve as yet. But the two things that must now be guarded against as fatal are this loss of Western nerve that the Kremlin seeks, and the loss of tempo in the Western defense effort that political convenience pleads for.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Congress is playing with fire — with the safety of the United States itself. For the issue is not how many divisions shall go to Europe. Nor is it whether a president hereafter will send our troops abroad by an arbitrary decision, nor whether, if Congress is indifferent now, a chief executive may later acquire the powers of a military dictatorship.

Those questions are important but not really the controlling ones. The controlling issue is how best to keep World War III from American territory, as was the case in both World War I and World War II.

Having committed itself to meet the aggressor in his tracks — to stop him before he gets to America — the United States, through the North Atlantic Treaty, ratified by more than two-thirds of the Senate, has already adopted a major military policy.

Gives President Rights

This policy, to be effective at all, necessarily grants to the President, as the commander-in-chief of our armed forces, the right to take instant action to repel an attack without debating the issue on Capitol Hill. The same principle which gives the President the right to act for the people to repel an attack gives him the right to send troops abroad to prevent that attack from arising — to place a sufficient military force in areas that can threaten a counter-action, and thus perhaps prevent any hostilities from arising.

The debate that has developed results from a natural conflict between the historically ingrained principle of constitutionalism, which says that Congress alone may declare war, and the new principle of a 1951 emergency period when an atomic-bomb raid can at any moment begin the attack and afford no opportunity for a President to ask authority from Congress to use the armed forces as a counter-threat in advance.

It will be conceded by the proponents and opponents in the present controversy in Congress that, if a large-scale war broke out, the President would have to ask Congress to declare a state of war or by resolution to recognize the existence of a state of war with enemy countries.

There is little objection to the President's taking the initiative in emergency steps when war breaks out and thereafter going to Congress for a ratifying resolution. This should have been done last June when an American army was ordered into Korea. It was wrong for the President to have failed to ask Congress immediately for ratification of what he had done in ordering our armed forces into Korea.

Delay Could Be Fatal

But it is equally wrong for Congress to insist that, before a military step of importance can be taken in the future — either in resisting an enemy or in getting our troops to Europe to anticipate an enemy attack — it should be necessary for the President to run the risks of a prolonged debate in both Houses. To insist even on consultation beforehand with congressional committees could mean a serious delay that might be fatal to the safety of the United States.

The clear-cut way for those who do not want troops sent to Europe is to propose a resolution to abrogate the North Atlantic Treaty. A showdown on this would defeat such a resolution.

The clear-cut way for those who do want troops to go to Europe now to prepare for an attack in the indeterminate future and to collaborate with our allies abroad in building up enough military strength to prevent a big war from breaking out is to submit a simple resolution stating that, under the existing treaty, it is the obligation of the United States to send troops to Europe, with the decision as to the number and disposition thereof to be vested solely in the President — which means, of course, the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, for they are his principal military advisers.

Such a resolution would clarify the atmosphere and force a showdown in which partisanship would be bound to be detected and the issue would be decided solely on the question of national safety.

Try And Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

Harris Shevelson was enticed to a lower grade school's graduation play, produced, directed—and written!—by the youngsters themselves. Every performer was at least a Duke or Duchess. The King had a whopping monologue in which he boasted of the five long years he had spent in battle, winning one decisive victory after another.

At this, the seven-year-old Queen stalked to the wings, and let forth five of the smallest kids in the school, dressed as infants. She pointed to them proudly and announced, "My king, I, too, have not been idle."

A well-lubricated drummer staggered into a hotel lobby, and picked up a pen to register. As he did so a remarkable facsimile of a bedbug crawled across the desk.

The drummer recoiled and informed the reception clerk, "I've been in lots of hotels, and I've been bitten by some mighty smart bedbugs, but—hic—this is the first time one ever came down to see what room I was getting!"

Cloud Over Iran

The next several weeks should tell whether current happenings in Iran are merely another Soviet war of nerves or the real thing. Early in March the premier and the education minister were assassinated, assassination attempts on other high officials were reported, riots broke out in the oil fields following a general strike, the capital was placed under martial law. Russia can count on a fervid nationalist movement in Iran to muddy the waters.

The Iranian parliament (Majlis) has voted to nationalize the nation's oil deposits, presumably by expropriation, within several months. And this although the British have offered to increase to 50 per cent the royalty they pay Iran for oil taken out. A stoppage of any length of time in the oil from Iran would probably impel the United States to divert some of its own oil supplies to Great Britain to keep the defense program against Soviet aggression in high gear.

The rich oil fields of southern Iran are British-owned (Anglo-Iranian Oil Co.). So the United States would find it awkward to intervene in Iran, in the absence of actual Soviet penetration, in a dispute about nationalizing the oil. Moreover, the British Socialist Government stands for nationalization of all natural resources and key industries, even if not by expropriation nor in disregard of treaties.

When Russia withdrew its troops from Iranian soil in 1946, under UN pressure, it received from the government at Teheran a concession to certain Iranian oil fields. But the Iranian parliament, in what Moscow calls an act of the blackest perfidy, refused to ratify the treaty for the concession.

Russia and Iran ratified a treaty in 1921 whereby Russian troops may enter Iran if necessary to protect it from aggression by a third nation or to prevent Iran from becoming a base for military action against Russia. Teheran says the treaty is no longer valid, Moscow says it is.

Communist Bookkeeping

Russia is telling the world that military expenditures in her "peace budget" total only $24,000,000,000 compared to $71,000,000,000 for the same items in the "war budget" of the United States. Russia is using trick bookkeeping to hide the fact that her arms effort exceeds those of other nations.

To say, for instance, that the United States is spending a larger percentage of its federal budget than Russia is on arms is deliberately misleading. This country has large state and local budgets compared to Russia. The federal budget of the United States is 25 per cent of national income. Russia's is 85 per cent of hers.

Russia is getting more armament for her money than the United States is. Russia pays soldiers $7.50 a month; the U. S. pays $75 and up. Russia has 15,000,000 slave laborers and provides them with subminimum standards of food, clothing and housing. If they were paid what American workers receive in defense industries, Russia's budget total would total many billions more.

Part of this country's "war budget" is for pensions and other benefits to veterans of the last war. No such item is included in the Russian budget. Another large item is economic and military aid to other countries. Russia includes no comparable item. All steel plants, canals, power stations and other expanded developments for military purposes are similarly omitted from Russia's military budget—but not from that of the U. S.

Summing up, it is revealed that Russia is spending more than 20 per cent of her national income on arms, while the West is spending 15 per cent. Russia is still leading the world in war preparations, unfortunately.

A Justice Dissents

Members of the United States Supreme Court have had television dumped right in their laps. They must decide whether the Federal Communications Commission exceeded its power in approving Columbia's color system over that of the Radio Corporation of America. But just what has to be cleared up? Several of the justices didn't hesitate to ask opposing lawyers what the issues were.

Justice Jackson asked, "Must we decide which system is technically superior? Or which is the better investment? I know nothing about TV sets—couldn't set one up if I had one." Justice Frankfurter chimed in, "Nobody knows less than I do about it." And Jackson said, "I dissent from that statement!"

The lawyers, of course, were quite sure about the issues as seen from their corners. The complexities of color TV roll over laymen, too, leaving them with the simple but profound feeling that umpiring this new development is like trying to umpire the coming of spring's colors. Winter may be loath to let the sap rise and the leaves grow—but spring has even more power this time of year. Who can doubt that color TV, like spring, will not wait too long on the courts of men?

Perhaps nobody knows that better than the justices of the Supreme Court. Perhaps this realization made them even more humble than usual in the knowledge they don't have the final answers to anything, but can only do their best as guides through the woods of human affairs.

"Beefleggers" Again

"Beefleggers"—rustlers who pick up a critter here and there and frequently slaughter them on the spot—are making their appearance again on the western ranges. Their operations were quite extensive during and immediately following the last war.

Operating in trucks instead of on horseback, these thieves are highly mobile and may be in an adjacent state before their depredations are discovered. The high price of beef makes their operations highly profitable, although the risk involved is great. Long penitentiary sentences are the fate of all rustlers who are caught.

In Lander, Wyo., the sheriff has organized a rustler patrol of half a dozen deputies to take to the trail of rustlers. More than 100 beef cattle have disappeared from one section of the county alone in recent weeks.

With the value of beef cattle averaging more than $250 on the range the former tendency to overlook a minor "discrepancy" in the tally has disappeared. When a single critter disappears the law now is alerted.

How To Keep Well

How's Your Incision?

SEVERAL years ago a medical classmate of mine announced at a mixed party that he was going to show everyone his appendectomy scar. When he took off his coat the women became embarrassed and the men wondered if he had indulged too freely. He rolled up his right sleeve and there was a scar on his forearm. Several years before this chap's right arm had been burned severely. Plastic surgery was needed and skin was grafted from the lowed abdomen to the denuded area on his arm. The appendectomy scar was included in the graft.

The abdominal scar was not too bad or too good. It was wide and rough because his appendix had ruptured and the incision became infected. This was before the days of penicillin and he was lucky to have survived. He never dreamed that the scar would land on his arm but this did not bother him because he had no aspirations to become a chorus girl on fan dancer.

Modern surgeons give their patients a better break. More and more incisions close in a thin, colorless line because they are permitted to heal under ideal conditions. One factor that encourages healthy repair is good nutrition and few individuals now come to surgery in a state of malnutrition. Moreover, the surgeon insists that the patient resume eating as soon as possible after the operation because food is needed for tissue building and proteins and vitamin C are essential along this line.

Gaseous distention of the abdomen may interfere with healing. When severe, it stretches the skin and separates the wound edges. This may be unavoidable even under the best care but surgeons are working on the problem and we hear of more and more individuals who undergo surgery without this uncomfortable aftermath. Stomach tubes and medicines help to keep the intestine in tone. Another valuable measure is keeping infection in tow with the wonder drugs as a stitch abscess or infected wound may mar an otherwise neat sewing job. But good surgical technic also is important in preventing complications. The original bandage is not removed until the stitches are ready to be taken out. This plan decreases the chances of wound contamination. The original bandage was applied in the operating room where everyone was wearing gowns, masks, caps, and gloves. So long as the lesion is not proving bothersome it need not be disturbed. The lesson to be learned is not to become curious and peek or poke around or demand that the dressing be changed.

Coughing is another bugaboo in the healing stage of incisions although good suture material and strong binders help along this line. If a respiratory disease develops, the antibiotics come to the rescue. But it is better to cough, even at the risk of opening the wound, rather than permit the air passageways to become blocked.

In ye olde days it was common practice for the surgeon to insert a gauze or rubber drain into the abdomen to permit pus to escape should abscess develop. But the drain was irritating and interfered with healing. Better scars also are obtained by cutting with the grain and not crossing a line created by a body creases. This is ideal but not always feasible. Nevertheless, it relieves tension, permits healing to occur more easily, looks better, and there is less scar formation. No one likes a huge incision but the original opening should be large enough to do the operation properly.

SIZE OF PUPILS

V. T. writes: What causes a narrow pupil and a wide pupil?

REPLY

The pupil of the eye is like the shutter on a camera. When more light is needed, as on a dark day, the opening enlarges, and vice versa. I'm assuming you are referring to pupils of the eyes and not to those in the classroom, where some are "narrow" and others are "wide."

NUMB FACE

M. G. writes: I have periods in which my face feels wooden. It used to come only after an upset but now it appears for no reason at all. What causes this feeling?

REPLY

Not having had a wooden face, I hardly know what you mean. If you refer to puffiness, there are many causes including allergy, kidney disease, and circulatory disturbances. If numbness is the difficulty, a disturbance of the facial nerves is a possibility. Occasionally an infected tooth or enlarged gland makes the face feel tight.

YAWNING

C. T. writes: I have been yawing 25 times a day for eight years. I also have angina pectoris. Are yawning and heart disease related?

REPLY

There is a remote possibility that a relationship exists but in your case it is questionable because the gaping tendency has existed for so long. Yawning is noted occasionally when the heart is in a state of failure; it is a manifestation of shotness of breath. The symptoms of angina pectoris are different. Could it be that you have been tired for eight years, or bored?

Chester, New Jersey, Adopts Kumrovec, Town In Yugoslavia; People There Are Vigorously Pro-American; G.I.'s Hit By Increased Living Costs

WASHINGTON—Four brief years ago an American plane flying along the Yugoslav-Austrian border was shot down by trigger-happy Yugoslav troops. Tempers flared diplomats protested, ill feeling between the United States and the most powerful nation in the Balkans reached a dangerous climax.

Today, in contrast, the small farming town of Chester, New Jersey, is adopting the Yugoslav town of Kumrovec, which happens to be the birthplace of Marshal Tito.

There is nothing official about this adoption ceremony. It was worked out not by the governments of either country, but through an exchange of messages between its citizens, in which 300 Chester school kids participated.

Most interesting thing about Kumrovec is that, though the birthplace of Tito, it's getting quite sick of communism and is vigorously pro-American. Gaston Coblentz, Belgrade correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, describes the town as "a lovely picturesque place in the Croatian hills, but the atmosphere is far from gay. The peasants are clinging to their land. All but two of the village families have defied local authorities by refusing to join a Red collective.

"The 250 families of Kumrovec are happy about their new tie with the United States; it signifies to them that a beneficent American influence may be exercised on the Communist government."

When I was in Yugoslavia recently, I found the Yugoslav people vigorously pro-American, violently anti-Russian. What is happening is that the United States long has maintained it did not care what kind of government another country had as long as it did not try to force its type of government on the rest of the world.

The people of Yugoslavia are now taking us up on this, and today's ceremony at Chester, N. J., is one indication.

G. I. Gripe Bag

In order to help enlisted men with their many problems, this column will publish from time to time excerpts from G. I. letters received, and the answers. Names are not published without permission:

"A Bunch of Sailors," Naval Station, San Diego, Calif.—"We feel a grave injustice is being done to us, and indirectly to our families, by the recent increases in clothing prices. The ship's store now charges more than double for most articles, whereas our standard maintenance allowance has been increased less than 50 per cent."

Answer—You are absolutely right that the cost of living has shot up in the Navy, so that enlisted men must now pay $39.65 for the same overcoat that sold for $17.50 before Korea, $20 for a blanket that previously sold for $7.50 and $16.50 for a jumper that used to sell for $6.70. This column has found that Navy clothing prices have increased from 127 to 146 per cent. Yet the monthly clothing allowance for enlisted men has been increased only 20 to 71 per cent, depending upon rank. The real blame, however, rests with the White House for not ordering inflation controls early enough. For, the truth is, the cost to the Navy of basic fabrics has shot up higher than the prices charged in the ship's store.

Lloyd Hoppes, Wabash, Indiana—"I am 20 years old, and I am also married. I went to see the recruiting officer today, and he told me that married men could not enlist in the Army. We want to help our country just as much as the single men."

Answer—Paradoxically it is true that at the same time the Army is crying for more manpower, it will not enlist married men below the grade of sergeant, though it will draft them. This is something the Army ought to explain to Congress. But if you wait around long enough, you may be drafted and still get a chance to serve.

A Noncommissioned Officer, Keesler Air Base, Miss.—"On Saturday, March 10, the NCO's were told if they did not become members of the NCO club by midnight, they would be restricted to the field. Yet an Air Force regulation plainly states that membership in an NCO club will be voluntary."

Answer—Brig. Gen. J. F. Powell, Keesler's commanding officer, admitted to this column that nonjoiners were restricted on the technicality that they hadn't paid up their debts. He explained that all non-commissioned officers "automatcially" belong to the NCO club, therefore those who hadn't paid their dues were restricted. However, he claimed that any NCO could have got out of this punishment by writing a "letter of resignation" from the club. This still smacks of intimidation and coercion to push the NCO's into a club which they weren't required to join. The real reason, this column has learned, was to collect the $1 membership fees sorely needed since the slot machines were abolished. This cut out the club's main revenue.

Allen Davidson, Quincy, Florida—"My uncle, Sergeant Jesse Ferguson, was wounded in Korea. During the retreat from North Korea, he got lost from his outfit for 17 days, and was found with his hands and feet frozen. He was flown to a Hospital in Japan and kept off his feet for one month. He is now back in Korea. I understand that once you get your hands and feet frozen, you should never let them get cold again. Why does the Army send combat men back to Korea who have had frozen hands or feet?"

Answer — Only light frostbite cases, which have fully recovered, are allowed to be sent back to combat. If Sergeant, Ferguson was frozen so severely that he had to be hospitalized for a month, he should not have been returned to Korea. This column has asked the Army for a complete investigation.

A Corporal, Somewhere in Korea—"I don't like to complain, but our rations are so low that the men are always hungry."

Answer—There is no food shortage in Korea. The Army supplies plenty of tinned foods for a normal daily diet, also does its best to deliver enough fresh food to each unit for at least one hot meal per day. However, under battle conditions, occasionally supplies are delayed or diverted. This has happened in isolated instances.

These Days

The Larry Parks Story

A CONGRESSIONAL committee which sets out to investigate a witness should complete its job or announce to the public that it has not completed the investigation. Otherwise, it betrays its trust and it places the witness in a false light. It does not take full advantage of his appearance before it and at the same time, it gives to the public the impression that his answers were inadequate.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities, which under the chairmanship of Martin Dies and J. Parnell Thomas served this country well, in spite of all left-wing criticisms, has proved itself to be inadequate during the past two years, under the chairmanship of John S. Wood.

Take, for instance, the investigation of Larry Parks. He appeared before the committee in executive session and answered all the questions that were asked of him. As far as it went, his testimony was adequate. He confessed to his own Communist participation; he named names where asked to do so. This is tough doing, when one works in an industry which is overanxious to protect the property value of advertised names, no matter what the owners of those names have done to damage their country.

Just as Parks' testimony was becoming important, a bell rang calling the members of the House of Representatives to a roll-call. Such a routine does not take long and the committee could have and should have resumed its hearing.

Instead, Parks was excused and the committee never called him back to an executive session. He was never asked essential questions leading to the present situation. He was never given an opportunity to explain positions which he and his colleagues took subsequent to 1945 when our alliance with Soviet Russia terminated.

The injustice is as great to him as it is to the people of the United States. Those who have read reports of the public session of the committee, at which Parks appeared, are naturally of the opinion that all he tried to do was to square himself by a pathetic recital of his background. What they do not know is that the House Committee on Un-American Activities failed to get the most information out of a witness and that when they had a friendly witness before them who was willing to testify, they shut him off because a bell rang.

This committee is coasting along on the great work done by Martin Dies, Robert Stripling, J. B. Matthews, J. Parnell Thomas and Richard Dixon. It is not doing a comparable service. It is a lazy, inadequate committee that submits to pressures by the Department of Justice, which is apparently seeking to prevent a second Alger Hiss case from developing.

A committee of Congress should be absolutely independent of the executive branch of government. It is not expected to recognize the political necessities or to respect

Matter Of Fact

FRANKFURT

PERHAPS it is wrong to try to find a pattern in all the strange, unnumbered signs and symptoms that mark the face of Europe in this critical, bleak spring of 1951. At first glance, for example, the behavior of Andrei Gromyko at Paris seems to have no connection with the increase in Soviet stocks of aviation gas in Eastern Germany. Yet after a month of intensive inquiry in Germany, this reporter would hazard a guess that an underlying pattern is there.

Indeed, this pattern was actually forcast as long ago as last spring in London by one of the greatest British wartime leaders, who is especially well qualified to judge the balance of military and other power between East and West. He was explaining that if the Western allies did not soon begin to see to their own defenses, they must expect disaster. Being reminded of the great Soviet superiority in all conventional weapons, he took up the central question—whether the Kremlin would permit the weakened West to rearm.

"You know," he said reflectively, "there will certainly be two or three very bad years when they are strong and we are only growing strong. It will be a very tricky time and we shall just have to get through it on nerve and the atomic bomb." He paused for a few moments, as though to consider the question, then resumed: "I am convinced that the Western lead in the atomic field is good enough, or at any rate can be good enough, to prevent a Soviet attack. To tell you the truth, I am much less worried about the atomic bomb than I am about our nerve."

Simple To Summarize

This "tricky time" has now begun, and all the evidence suggests that this wise Englishman foresaw the main difficulty very clearly. The essential features of the existing situation can, in fact, be very simply summarized.

First, the effort of rebuilding Western power is in itself disagreeable and in some aspects politically unpopular. The task of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, to construct a solid defense of Western Europe, is especially complex and troublesome, because it necessarily involves bringing additional American troops to Europe, which is disliked in the United States, and creating German armed contingents, which is disliked in Europe.

Second, in order to frustrate the whole plan for Western rearmament, the Kremlin needs only to block a part of it. Half enough divisions will not be much better than one-tenth enough or one-quarter enough, when the accumulation of a Soviet atomic stockpile cancels out the deterrent effect of our existing lead in atomic weapons. The Kremlin, having noted this vital fact, has set out to frustrate the Western defense effort by preventing any German contribution to it.

Third, the so-called atomic lead of the Western nations is really all that prevents a Kremlin aggression in Europe tomorrow. But the Europeans, seeing the great power of the Soviet army, deeply conscious of their own weakness, are hardly aware of the invisible protection of the atomic deterrent. Thus they tend to forget the basic rules, that an imperialist dictatorship attacks when it thinks it can win, that this kind of government cannot be goaded into attack by provocation, and that it cannot be dissuaded from attack by sweetness. Hence, there is a natural desire, in the Western European governments as well as among the peoples, to avoid doing what is regarded as "provocative," such as recreating German armed contingents.

Keeping Nerve Is Vital

It is precisely this situation which the Kremlin has now set out to exploit. Here in Germany, you find exceedingly shrewd officials who expect the Soviet armies in Eastern Europe to be reinforced by about two corps, one of armor and one of artillery, in early May. But these same officials do not say the purpose will be to overrun Western Europe the next morning. On the contrary, they say most emphatically that the only immediate purpose will be to inspire terror and the loss of nerve that the wise Englishman indicated he feared.

If the Soviet threats, empty although they probably are at this time should carry conviction in Paris or in London, then there will be a break in the Western alliance, probably when the Foreign Ministers meet. If this happens in turn, the ally whose nerve breaks will seek to barter off the German contribution to Eastern defense or perhaps some other essential feature of the Western defense plan, against some such empty concession as to temporary reduction of the number of Soviet divisions in Eastern Germany. That way, the Kremlin will be sure to win in the long run.

Furthermore, if the Western alliance is thus split this summer—and our Congress seems at the moment to be working as hard for it as the Kremlin—there will be other, more immediate consequences. For instance, if the West is divided and paralyzed, the odds on an early attack on Yugoslavia will change from less than even to somewhere close to nine to five in favor. There is no better way to tempt the Kremlin onwards than to seem to lose nerve.

Fortunately, so far as the transactions in Paris can be judged from here, there seems to have been no loss of nerve as yet. But the two things that must now be guarded against as fatal are this loss of Western nerve that the Kremlin seeks, and the loss of tempo in the Western defense effort that political convenience pleads for.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Congress is playing with fire — with the safety of the United States itself. For the issue is not how many divisions shall go to Europe. Nor is it whether a president hereafter will send our troops abroad by an arbitrary decision, nor whether, if Congress is indifferent now, a chief executive may later acquire the powers of a military dictatorship.

Those questions are important but not really the controlling ones. The controlling issue is how best to keep World War III from American territory, as was the case in both World War I and World War II.

Having committed itself to meet the aggressor in his tracks — to stop him before he gets to America — the United States, through the North Atlantic Treaty, ratified by more than two-thirds of the Senate, has already adopted a major military policy.

Gives President Rights

This policy, to be effective at all, necessarily grants to the President, as the commander-in-chief of our armed forces, the right to take instant action to repel an attack without debating the issue on Capitol Hill. The same principle which gives the President the right to act for the people to repel an attack gives him the right to send troops abroad to prevent that attack from arising — to place a sufficient military force in areas that can threaten a counter-action, and thus perhaps prevent any hostilities from arising.

The debate that has developed results from a natural conflict between the historically ingrained principle of constitutionalism, which says that Congress alone may declare war, and the new principle of a 1951 emergency period when an atomic-bomb raid can at any moment begin the attack and afford no opportunity for a President to ask authority from Congress to use the armed forces as a counter-threat in advance.

It will be conceded by the proponents and opponents in the present controversy in Congress that, if a large-scale war broke out, the President would have to ask Congress to declare a state of war or by resolution to recognize the existence of a state of war with enemy countries.

There is little objection to the President's taking the initiative in emergency steps when war breaks out and thereafter going to Congress for a ratifying resolution. This should have been done last June when an American army was ordered into Korea. It was wrong for the President to have failed to ask Congress immediately for ratification of what he had done in ordering our armed forces into Korea.

Delay Could Be Fatal

But it is equally wrong for Congress to insist that, before a military step of importance can be taken in the future — either in resisting an enemy or in getting our troops to Europe to anticipate an enemy attack — it should be necessary for the President to run the risks of a prolonged debate in both Houses. To insist even on consultation beforehand with congressional committees could mean a serious delay that might be fatal to the safety of the United States.

The clear-cut way for those who do not want troops sent to Europe is to propose a resolution to abrogate the North Atlantic Treaty. A showdown on this would defeat such a resolution.

The clear-cut way for those who do want troops to go to Europe now to prepare for an attack in the indeterminate future and to collaborate with our allies abroad in building up enough military strength to prevent a big war from breaking out is to submit a simple resolution stating that, under the existing treaty, it is the obligation of the United States to send troops to Europe, with the decision as to the number and disposition thereof to be vested solely in the President — which means, of course, the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, for they are his principal military advisers.

Such a resolution would clarify the atmosphere and force a showdown in which partisanship would be bound to be detected and the issue would be decided solely on the question of national safety.

Try And Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

Harris Shevelson was enticed to a lower grade school's graduation play, produced, directed—and written!—by the youngsters themselves. Every performer was at least a Duke or Duchess. The King had a whopping monologue in which he boasted of the five long years he had spent in battle, winning one decisive victory after another.

At this, the seven-year-old Queen stalked to the wings, and let forth five of the smallest kids in the school, dressed as infants. She pointed to them proudly and announced, "My king, I, too, have not been idle."

A well-lubricated drummer staggered into a hotel lobby, and picked up a pen to register. As he did so a remarkable facsimile of a bedbug crawled across the desk.

The drummer recoiled and informed the reception clerk, "I've been in lots of hotels, and I've been bitten by some mighty smart bedbugs, but—hic—this is the first time one ever came down to see what room I was getting!"

Cloud Over Iran

The next several weeks should tell whether current happenings in Iran are merely another Soviet war of nerves or the real thing. Early in March the premier and the education minister were assassinated, assassination attempts on other high officials were reported, riots broke out in the oil fields following a general strike, the capital was placed under martial law. Russia can count on a fervid nationalist movement in Iran to muddy the waters.

The Iranian parliament (Majlis) has voted to nationalize the nation's oil deposits, presumably by expropriation, within several months. And this although the British have offered to increase to 50 per cent the royalty they pay Iran for oil taken out. A stoppage of any length of time in the oil from Iran would probably impel the United States to divert some of its own oil supplies to Great Britain to keep the defense program against Soviet aggression in high gear.

The rich oil fields of southern Iran are British-owned (Anglo-Iranian Oil Co.). So the United States would find it awkward to intervene in Iran, in the absence of actual Soviet penetration, in a dispute about nationalizing the oil. Moreover, the British Socialist Government stands for nationalization of all natural resources and key industries, even if not by expropriation nor in disregard of treaties.

When Russia withdrew its troops from Iranian soil in 1946, under UN pressure, it received from the government at Teheran a concession to certain Iranian oil fields. But the Iranian parliament, in what Moscow calls an act of the blackest perfidy, refused to ratify the treaty for the concession.

Russia and Iran ratified a treaty in 1921 whereby Russian troops may enter Iran if necessary to protect it from aggression by a third nation or to prevent Iran from becoming a base for military action against Russia. Teheran says the treaty is no longer valid, Moscow says it is.

Communist Bookkeeping

Russia is telling the world that military expenditures in her "peace budget" total only $24,000,000,000 compared to $71,000,000,000 for the same items in the "war budget" of the United States. Russia is using trick bookkeeping to hide the fact that her arms effort exceeds those of other nations.

To say, for instance, that the United States is spending a larger percentage of its federal budget than Russia is on arms is deliberately misleading. This country has large state and local budgets compared to Russia. The federal budget of the United States is 25 per cent of national income. Russia's is 85 per cent of hers.

Russia is getting more armament for her money than the United States is. Russia pays soldiers $7.50 a month; the U. S. pays $75 and up. Russia has 15,000,000 slave laborers and provides them with subminimum standards of food, clothing and housing. If they were paid what American workers receive in defense industries, Russia's budget total would total many billions more.

Part of this country's "war budget" is for pensions and other benefits to veterans of the last war. No such item is included in the Russian budget. Another large item is economic and military aid to other countries. Russia includes no comparable item. All steel plants, canals, power stations and other expanded developments for military purposes are similarly omitted from Russia's military budget—but not from that of the U. S.

Summing up, it is revealed that Russia is spending more than 20 per cent of her national income on arms, while the West is spending 15 per cent. Russia is still leading the world in war preparations, unfortunately.

A Justice Dissents

Members of the United States Supreme Court have had television dumped right in their laps. They must decide whether the Federal Communications Commission exceeded its power in approving Columbia's color system over that of the Radio Corporation of America. But just what has to be cleared up? Several of the justices didn't hesitate to ask opposing lawyers what the issues were.

Justice Jackson asked, "Must we decide which system is technically superior? Or which is the better investment? I know nothing about TV sets—couldn't set one up if I had one." Justice Frankfurter chimed in, "Nobody knows less than I do about it." And Jackson said, "I dissent from that statement!"

The lawyers, of course, were quite sure about the issues as seen from their corners. The complexities of color TV roll over laymen, too, leaving them with the simple but profound feeling that umpiring this new development is like trying to umpire the coming of spring's colors. Winter may be loath to let the sap rise and the leaves grow—but spring has even more power this time of year. Who can doubt that color TV, like spring, will not wait too long on the courts of men?

Perhaps nobody knows that better than the justices of the Supreme Court. Perhaps this realization made them even more humble than usual in the knowledge they don't have the final answers to anything, but can only do their best as guides through the woods of human affairs.

"Beefleggers" Again

"Beefleggers"—rustlers who pick up a critter here and there and frequently slaughter them on the spot—are making their appearance again on the western ranges. Their operations were quite extensive during and immediately following the last war.

Operating in trucks instead of on horseback, these thieves are highly mobile and may be in an adjacent state before their depredations are discovered. The high price of beef makes their operations highly profitable, although the risk involved is great. Long penitentiary sentences are the fate of all rustlers who are caught.

In Lander, Wyo., the sheriff has organized a rustler patrol of half a dozen deputies to take to the trail of rustlers. More than 100 beef cattle have disappeared from one section of the county alone in recent weeks.

With the value of beef cattle averaging more than $250 on the range the former tendency to overlook a minor "discrepancy" in the tally has disappeared. When a single critter disappears the law now is alerted.

How To Keep Well

How's Your Incision?

SEVERAL years ago a medical classmate of mine announced at a mixed party that he was going to show everyone his appendectomy scar. When he took off his coat the women became embarrassed and the men wondered if he had indulged too freely. He rolled up his right sleeve and there was a scar on his forearm. Several years before this chap's right arm had been burned severely. Plastic surgery was needed and skin was grafted from the lowed abdomen to the denuded area on his arm. The appendectomy scar was included in the graft.

The abdominal scar was not too bad or too good. It was wide and rough because his appendix had ruptured and the incision became infected. This was before the days of penicillin and he was lucky to have survived. He never dreamed that the scar would land on his arm but this did not bother him because he had no aspirations to become a chorus girl on fan dancer.

Modern surgeons give their patients a better break. More and more incisions close in a thin, colorless line because they are permitted to heal under ideal conditions. One factor that encourages healthy repair is good nutrition and few individuals now come to surgery in a state of malnutrition. Moreover, the surgeon insists that the patient resume eating as soon as possible after the operation because food is needed for tissue building and proteins and vitamin C are essential along this line.

Gaseous distention of the abdomen may interfere with healing. When severe, it stretches the skin and separates the wound edges. This may be unavoidable even under the best care but surgeons are working on the problem and we hear of more and more individuals who undergo surgery without this uncomfortable aftermath. Stomach tubes and medicines help to keep the intestine in tone. Another valuable measure is keeping infection in tow with the wonder drugs as a stitch abscess or infected wound may mar an otherwise neat sewing job. But good surgical technic also is important in preventing complications. The original bandage is not removed until the stitches are ready to be taken out. This plan decreases the chances of wound contamination. The original bandage was applied in the operating room where everyone was wearing gowns, masks, caps, and gloves. So long as the lesion is not proving bothersome it need not be disturbed. The lesson to be learned is not to become curious and peek or poke around or demand that the dressing be changed.

Coughing is another bugaboo in the healing stage of incisions although good suture material and strong binders help along this line. If a respiratory disease develops, the antibiotics come to the rescue. But it is better to cough, even at the risk of opening the wound, rather than permit the air passageways to become blocked.

In ye olde days it was common practice for the surgeon to insert a gauze or rubber drain into the abdomen to permit pus to escape should abscess develop. But the drain was irritating and interfered with healing. Better scars also are obtained by cutting with the grain and not crossing a line created by a body creases. This is ideal but not always feasible. Nevertheless, it relieves tension, permits healing to occur more easily, looks better, and there is less scar formation. No one likes a huge incision but the original opening should be large enough to do the operation properly.

SIZE OF PUPILS

V. T. writes: What causes a narrow pupil and a wide pupil?

REPLY

The pupil of the eye is like the shutter on a camera. When more light is needed, as on a dark day, the opening enlarges, and vice versa. I'm assuming you are referring to pupils of the eyes and not to those in the classroom, where some are "narrow" and others are "wide."

NUMB FACE

M. G. writes: I have periods in which my face feels wooden. It used to come only after an upset but now it appears for no reason at all. What causes this feeling?

REPLY

Not having had a wooden face, I hardly know what you mean. If you refer to puffiness, there are many causes including allergy, kidney disease, and circulatory disturbances. If numbness is the difficulty, a disturbance of the facial nerves is a possibility. Occasionally an infected tooth or enlarged gland makes the face feel tight.

YAWNING

C. T. writes: I have been yawing 25 times a day for eight years. I also have angina pectoris. Are yawning and heart disease related?

REPLY

There is a remote possibility that a relationship exists but in your case it is questionable because the gaping tendency has existed for so long. Yawning is noted occasionally when the heart is in a state of failure; it is a manifestation of shotness of breath. The symptoms of angina pectoris are different. Could it be that you have been tired for eight years, or bored?

Chester, New Jersey, Adopts Kumrovec, Town In Yugoslavia; People There Are Vigorously Pro-American; G.I.'s Hit By Increased Living Costs

WASHINGTON—Four brief years ago an American plane flying along the Yugoslav-Austrian border was shot down by trigger-happy Yugoslav troops. Tempers flared diplomats protested, ill feeling between the United States and the most powerful nation in the Balkans reached a dangerous climax.

Today, in contrast, the small farming town of Chester, New Jersey, is adopting the Yugoslav town of Kumrovec, which happens to be the birthplace of Marshal Tito.

There is nothing official about this adoption ceremony. It was worked out not by the governments of either country, but through an exchange of messages between its citizens, in which 300 Chester school kids participated.

Most interesting thing about Kumrovec is that, though the birthplace of Tito, it's getting quite sick of communism and is vigorously pro-American. Gaston Coblentz, Belgrade correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, describes the town as "a lovely picturesque place in the Croatian hills, but the atmosphere is far from gay. The peasants are clinging to their land. All but two of the village families have defied local authorities by refusing to join a Red collective.

"The 250 families of Kumrovec are happy about their new tie with the United States; it signifies to them that a beneficient American influence may be exercised on the Communist government."

When I was in Yugoslavia recently, I found the Yugoslav people vigorously pro-American, violently anti-Russian. What is happening is that the United States long has maintained it did not care what kind of government another country had as long as it did not try to force its type of government on the rest of the world.

The people of Yugoslavia are now taking us up on this, and today's ceremony at Chester, N. J., is one indication.

G. I. Gripe Bag

In order to help enlisted men with their many problems, this column will publish from time to time excerpts from G. I. letters received, and the answers. Names are not published without permission:

"A Bunch of Sailors," Naval Station, San Diego, Calif.—"We feel a grave injustice is being done to us, and indirectly to our families, by the recent increases in clothing prices. The ship's store now charges more than double for most articles, whereas our standard maintenance allowance has been increased less than 50 per cent."

Answer—You are absolutely right that the cost of living has shot up in the Navy, so that enlisted men must now pay $39.65 for the same overcoat that sold for $17.50 before Korea, $20 for a blanket that previously sold for $7.50 and $16.50 for a jumper that used to sell for $6.70. This column has found that Navy clothing prices have increased from 127 to 146 per cent. Yet the monthly clothing allowance for enlisted men has been increased only 20 to 71 per cent, depending upon rank. The real blame, however, rests with the White House for not ordering inflation controls early enough. For, the truth is, the cost to the Navy of basic fabrics has shot up higher than the prices charged in the ship's store.

Lloyd Hoppes, Wabash, Indiana—"I am 20 years old, and I am also married. I went to see the recruiting officer today, and he told me that married men could not enlist in the Army. We want to help our country just as much as the single men."

Answer—Paradoxically it is true that at the same time the Army is crying for more manpower, it will not enlist married men below the grade of sergeant, though it will draft them. This is something the Army ought to explain to Congress. But if you wait around long enough, you may be drafted and still get a chance to serve.

A Noncommissioned Officer, Keesler Air Base, Miss.—"On Saturday, March 10, the NCO's were told if they did not become members of the NCO club by midnight, they would be restricted to the field. Yet an Air Force regulation plainly states that membership in an NCO club will be voluntary."

Answer—Brig. Gen. J. F. Powell, Keesler's commanding officer, admitted to this column that nonjoiners were restricted on the technicality that they hadn't paid up their debts. He explained that all non-commissioned officers "automatcially" belong to the NCO club, therefore those who hadn't paid their dues were restricted. However, he claimed that any NCO could have got out of this punishment by writing a "letter of resignation" from the club. This still smacks of intimidation and coercion to push the NCO's into a club which they weren't required to join. The real reason, this column has learned, was to collect the $1 membership fees sorely needed since the slot machines were abolished. This cut out the club's main revenue.

Allen Davidson, Quincy, Florida—"My uncle, Sergeant Jesse Ferguson, was wounded in Korea. During the retreat from North Korea, he got lost from his outfit for 17 days, and was found with his hands and feet frozen. He was flown to a Hospital in Japan and kept off his feet for one month. He is now back in Korea. I understand that once you get your hands and feet frozen, you should never let them get cold again. Why does the Army send combat men back to Korea who have had frozen hands or feet?"

Answer — Only light frostbite cases, which have fully recovered, are allowed to be sent back to combat. If Sergeant, Ferguson was frozen so severely that he had to be hospitalized for a month, he should not have been returned to Korea. This column has asked the Army for a complete investigation.

A Corporal, Somewhere in Korea—"I don't like to complain, but our rations are so low that the men are always hungry."

Answer—There is no food shortage in Korea. The Army supplies plenty of tinned foods for a normal daily diet, also does its best to deliver enough fresh food to each unit for at least one hot meal per day. However, under battle conditions, occasionally supplies are delayed or diverted. This has happened in isolated instances.

The Larry Parks Story

A CONGRESSIONAL committee which sets out to investigate a witness should complete its job or announce to the public that it has not completed the investigation. Otherwise, it betrays its trust and it places the witness in a false light. It does not take full advantage of his appearance before it and at the same time, it gives to the public the impression that his answers were inadequate.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities, which under the chairmanship of Martin Dies and J. Parnell Thomas served this country well, in spite of all left-wing criticisms, has proved itself to be inadequate during the past two years, under the chairmanship of John S. Wood.

Take, for instance, the investigation of Larry Parks. He appeared before the committee in executive session and answered all the questions that were asked of him. As far as it went, his testimony was adequate. He confessed to his own Communist participation; he named names where asked to do so. This is tough doing, when one works in an industry which is overanxious to protect the property value of advertised names, no matter what the owners of those names have done to damage their country.

Just as Parks' testimony was becoming important, a bell rang calling the members of the House of Representatives to a roll-call. Such a routine does not take long and the committee could have and should have resumed its hearing.

Instead, Parks was excused and the committee never called him back to an executive session. He was never asked essential questions leading to the present situation. He was never given an opportunity to explain positions which he and his colleagues took subsequent to 1945 when our alliance with Soviet Russia terminated.

The injustice is as great to him as it is to the people of the United States. Those who have read reports of the public session of the committee, at which Parks appeared, are naturally of the opinion that all he tried to do was to square himself by a pathetic recital of his background. What they do not know is that the House Committee on Un-American Activities failed to get the most information out of a witness and that when they had a friendly witness before them who was willing to testify, they shut him off because a bell rang.

This committee is coasting along on the great work done by Martin Dies, Robert Stripling, J. B. Matthews, J. Parnell Thomas and Richard Dixon. It is not doing a comparable service. It is a lazy, inadequate committee that submits to pressures by the Department of Justice, which is apparently seeking to prevent a second Alger Hiss case from developing.

A committee of Congress should be absolutely independent of the executive branch of government. It is not expected to recognize the political necessities or to respect

Matter Of Fact

FRANKFURT

PERHAPS it is wrong to try to find a pattern in all the strange, unnumbered signs and symptoms that mark the face of Europe in this critical, bleak spring of 1951. At first glance, for example, the behavior of Andrei Gromyko at Paris seems to have no connection with the increase in Soviet stocks of aviation gas in Eastern Germany. Yet after a month of intensive inquiry in Germany, this reporter would hazard a guess that an underlying pattern is there.

Indeed, this pattern was actually forcast as long ago as last spring in London by one of the greatest British wartime leaders, who is especially well qualified to judge the balance of military and other power between East and West. He was explaining that if the Western allies did not soon begin to see to their own defenses, they must expect disaster. Being reminded of the great Soviet superiority in all conventional weapons, he took up the central question—whether the Kremlin would permit the weakened West to rearm.

"You know," he said reflectively, "there will certainly be two or three very bad years when they are strong and we are only growing strong. It will be a very tricky time and we shall just have to get through it on nerve and the atomic bomb." He paused for a few moments, as though to consider the question, then resumed: "I am convinced that the Western lead in the atomic field is good enough, or at any rate can be good enough, to prevent a Soviet attack. To tell you the truth, I am much less worried about the atomic bomb than I am about our nerve."

Simple To Summarize

This "tricky time" has now begun, and all the evidence suggests that this wise Englishman foresaw the main difficulty very clearly. The essential features of the existing situation can, in fact, be very simply summarized.

First, the effort of rebuilding Western power is in itself disagreeable and in some aspects politically unpopular. The task of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, to construct a solid defense of Western Europe, is especially complex and troublesome, because it necessarily involves bringing additional American troops to Europe, which is disliked in the United States, and creating German armed contingents, which is disliked in Europe.

Second, in order to frustrate the whole plan for Western rearmament, the Kremlin needs only to block a part of it. Half enough divisions will not be much better than one-tenth enough or one-quarter enough, when the accumulation of a Soviet atomic stockpile cancels out the deterrent effect of our existing lead in atomic weapons. The Kremlin, having noted this vital fact, has set out to frustrate the Western defense effort by preventing any German contribution to it.

Third, the so-called atomic lead of the Western nations is really all that prevents a Kremlin aggression in Europe tomorrow. But the Europeans, seeing the great power of the Soviet army, deeply conscious of their own weakness, are hardly aware of the invisible protection of the atomic deterrent. Thus they tend to forget the basic rules, that an imperialist dictatorship attacks when it thinks it can win, that this kind of government cannot be goaded into attack by provocation, and that it cannot be dissuaded from attack by sweetness. Hence, there is a natural desire, in the Western European governments as well as among the peoples, to avoid doing what is regarded as "provocative," such as recreating German armed contingents.

Keeping Nerve Is Vital

It is precisely this situation which the Kremlin has now set out to exploit. Here in Germany, you find exceedingly shrewd officials who expect the Soviet armies in Eastern Europe to be reinforced by about two corps, one of armor and one of artillery, in early May. But these same officials do not say the purpose will be to overrun Western Europe the next morning. On the contrary, they say most emphatically that the only immediate purpose will be to inspire terror and the loss of nerve that the wise Englishman indicated he feared.

If the Soviet threats, empty although they probably are at this time should carry conviction in Paris or in London, then there will be a break in the Western alliance, probably when the Foreign Ministers meet. If this happens in turn, the ally whose nerve breaks will seek to barter off the German contribution to Eastern defense or perhaps some other essential feature of the Western defense plan, against some such empty concession as to temporary reduction of the number of Soviet divisions in Eastern Germany. That way, the Kremlin will be sure to win in the long run.

Furthermore, if the Western alliance is thus split this summer—and our Congress seems at the moment to be working as hard for it as the Kremlin—there will be other, more immediate consequences. For instance, if the West is divided and paralyzed, the odds on an early attack on Yugoslavia will change from less than even to somewhere close to nine to five in favor. There is no better way to tempt the Kremlin onwards than to seem to lose nerve.

Fortunately, so far as the transactions in Paris can be judged from here, there seems to have been no loss of nerve as yet. But the two things that must now be guarded against as fatal are this loss of Western nerve that the Kremlin seeks, and the loss of tempo in the Western defense effort that political convenience pleads for.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Congress is playing with fire — with the safety of the United States itself. For the issue is not how many divisions shall go to Europe. Nor is it whether a president hereafter will send our troops abroad by an arbitrary decision, nor whether, if Congress is indifferent now, a chief executive may later acquire the powers of a military dictatorship.

Those questions are important but not really the controlling ones. The controlling issue is how best to keep World War III from American territory, as was the case in both World War I and World War II.

Having committed itself to meet the aggressor in his tracks — to stop him before he gets to America — the United States, through the North Atlantic Treaty, ratified by more than two-thirds of the Senate, has already adopted a major military policy.

Gives President Rights

This policy, to be effective at all, necessarily grants to the President, as the commander-in-chief of our armed forces, the right to take instant action to repel an attack without debating the issue on Capitol Hill. The same principle which gives the President the right to act for the people to repel an attack gives him the right to send troops abroad to prevent that attack from arising — to place a sufficient military force in areas that can threaten a counter-action, and thus perhaps prevent any hostilities from arising.

The debate that has developed results from a natural conflict between the historically ingrained principle of constitutionalism, which says that Congress alone may declare war, and the new principle of a 1951 emergency period when an atomic-bomb raid can at any moment begin the attack and afford no opportunity for a President to ask authority from Congress to use the armed forces as a counter-threat in advance.

It will be conceded by the proponents and opponents in the present controversy in Congress that, if a large-scale war broke out, the President would have to ask Congress to declare a state of war or by resolution to recognize the existence of a state of war with enemy countries.

There is little objection to the President's taking the initiative in emergency steps when war breaks out and thereafter going to Congress for a ratifying resolution. This should have been done last June when an American army was ordered into Korea. It was wrong for the President to have failed to ask Congress immediately for ratification of what he had done in ordering our armed forces into Korea.

Delay Could Be Fatal

But it is equally wrong for Congress to insist that, before a military step of importance can be taken in the future — either in resisting an enemy or in getting our troops to Europe to anticipate an enemy attack — it should be necessary for the President to run the risks of a prolonged debate in both Houses. To insist even on consultation beforehand with congressional committees could mean a serious delay that might be fatal to the safety of the United States.

The clear-cut way for those who do not want troops sent to Europe is to propose a resolution to abrogate the North Atlantic Treaty. A showdown on this would defeat such a resolution.

The clear-cut way for those who do want troops to go to Europe now to prepare for an attack in the indeterminate future and to collaborate with our allies abroad in building up enough military strength to prevent a big war from breaking out is to submit a simple resolution stating that, under the existing treaty, it is the obligation of the United States to send troops to Europe, with the decision as to the number and disposition thereof to be vested solely in the President — which means, of course, the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, for they are his principal military advisers.

Such a resolution would clarify the atmosphere and force a showdown in which partisanship would be bound to be detected and the issue would be decided solely on the question of national safety.

Try And Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

Harris Shevelson was enticed to a lower grade school's graduation play, produced, directed—and written!—by the youngsters themselves. Every performer was at least a Duke or Duchess. The King had a whopping monologue in which he boasted of the five long years he had spent in battle, winning one decisive victory after another.

At this, the seven-year-old Queen stalked to the wings, and let forth five of the smallest kids in the school, dressed as infants. She pointed to them proudly and announced, "My king, I, too, have not been idle."

A well-lubricated drummer staggered into a hotel lobby, and picked up a pen to register. As he did so a remarkable facsimile of a bedbug crawled across the desk.

The drummer recoiled and informed the reception clerk, "I've been in lots of hotels, and I've been bitten by some mighty smart bedbugs, but—hic—this is the first time one ever came down to see what room I was getting!"

TWO WAYS OF DISPLAY

DEFENDING against a No Trump game contract, two diametrically different courses are available to you. One is that which you see most frequently—a race to set up cards in your own suit before the declarer can develop enough of his own. The antithesis of this is the combative procedure of striving to destroy the declarer's assets, to keep him from having a means of scoring the nine tricks he requires. This usually consists of hitting at his entries or re-entries for establishable cards in his own hand or the dummy, ordinarily the latter. Sometimes in a tournament or team match you see both methods tried.

One East-West pair in a team game beat that contract, through keen work by West, whereas humdrum methods at the other table enabled the declarer to make his contract and an extra trick to boot. Each time the spade 8 was led. The keen defender in the West saw the danger of the dummy's red suits, which might produce a bunch of tricks unless their sting was drawn. The club A was a sure re-entry for one or both of them.

West went after it with everything he had, taking the lead with the spade A and sending back his club K. North let that win, put his 9 on the 7, which the 10 covered, and then hopelessly played the dummy's A. He finessed the heart Q, scored the diamond A and K, fortunately dropped the heart K with the A and scored the heart J. He led the spade 6 to the 7 and 9 and West returned the Q to let the K and J win. But North's goose was now cooked. He had to give up two club tricks at the end to be down one.

In the other room, West put his 9 on the spade 8 lead and the J won. The diamond A and K scored and the club A furnished entry for the diamond Q and J, followed by the heart Q finesse, the A dropping the K and the J winning. Now the club 3 was led to the K. West also scored the spade A, but had to lead his Q to the K to give North an extra trick. The declarer willingly gave up his club J to the Q on the final trick.

ALONG THE POTOMAC TO WASHINGTON

(By Representative J. Glenn Beall, Sixth Maryland District)

LAST week the President signed an amendment to the McCarran Act, officially known as the Internal Security Act of 1950, which will permit aliens who were unwilling members of totalitarian groups to enter this country. This amendment will permit an estimated 2,000 war brides who belonged to youth groups and other organizations in Europe and Japan to enter this country. The new bill does not apply to persons who were Fascists or Nazis by their own free will nor to persons who were outright Communists. The so-called nominal totalitarians are defined as those listed as members when they were under 16 years of age, those who were forced to join, or those who had to join in order to obtain food, clothing or similar necessities. About 100,000 people will be affected by this amendment.

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, and the Senate investigation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairmanned by Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, have brought a sickening and shocking story of crime and lack of ethical standards threading themselves throughout our entire political structure. The entire country owes a vote of thanks to these Senators who, regardless of political repercusions within their own party, forged ahead with investigations and brought the stench out into the open.

In regard to the RFC investigation Senator Fulbright stated, "Scandals in our government are not a new phenomenon in our history. What seems to be new about these scandals is the moral blindness or callousness which allows those in responsible positions to accept the practices which the facts reveal." If such conditions and those revealed in the Kefauver crime investigation are to be cleaned up, every citizen should insist upon good government from top to bottom based on integrity and good moral conduct in local, state, and national affairs.

A study of the budget figures for fiscal year 1952 discloses that President Truman is asking four times as much money for the White House and Executive Offices as he spent two years ago. The President is asking Congress for $35,331,215 for himself, his office and operations of the White House. In 1950 the expenditures for the same functions were $8,406,888. Expenditures for 1951 are estimated at $21,261,139. The biggest amount sought for 1952 in the President's budget is a fund of $25 million for national defense emergencies which he would have blanket power to spend at his own discretion. For his own salary and expenses and for those on the White House staff, the President is asking $1,883,615, a boost of 19 per cent as compared with $1,585,553 for the current year. The President would increase the number of White House employes from 250 to 285. In 1930 there were 37 employes in the White House.

The federal government is dumping 15 million bushels of potatoes in Maine which would make nine million gallons of alcohol for defense.

I contacted the General Superintendent of Postal Transportation Service relative to assigning surplus clerks to remaining trains from Roanoke to Shenandoah, Va. Some of the trains have been discontinued and the clerks surplussed, however, the remaining trains will have to carry the load and I have asked that enough clerks be assigned to carry on the work.

In the other room, West put his 9 on the spade 8 lead and the J won. The diamond A and K scored and the club A furnished entry for the diamond Q and J, followed by the heart Q finesse, the A dropping the K and the J winning. Now the club 3 was led to the K. West also scored the spade A, but had to lead his Q to the K to give North an extra trick. The declarer willingly gave up his club J to the Q on the final trick.

ALONG THE POTOMAC TO WASHINGTON

(By Representative J. Glenn Beall, Sixth Maryland District)

LAST week the President signed an amendment to the McCarran Act, officially known as the Internal Security Act of 1950, which will permit aliens who were unwilling members of totalitarian groups to enter this country. This amendment will permit an estimated 2,000 war brides who belonged to youth groups and other organizations in Europe and Japan to enter this country. The new bill does not apply to persons who were Fascists or Nazis by their own free will nor to persons who were outright Communists. The so-called nominal totalitarians are defined as those listed as members when they were under 16 years of age, those who were forced to join, or those who had to join in order to obtain food, clothing or similar necessities. About 100,000 people will be affected by this amendment.

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, and the Senate investigation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairmanned by Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, have brought a sickening and shocking story of crime and lack of ethical standards threading themselves throughout our entire political structure. The entire country owes a vote of thanks to these Senators who, regardless of political repercussions within their own party, forged ahead with investigations and brought the stench out into the open.

In regard to the RFC investigation Senator Fulbright stated, "Scandals in our government are not a new phenomenon in our history. What seems to be new about these scandals is the moral blindness or callousness which allows those in responsible positions to accept the practices which the facts reveal." If such conditions and those revealed in the Kefauver crime investigation are to be cleaned up, every citizen should insist upon good government from top to bottom based on integrity and good moral conduct in local, state, and national affairs.

A study of the budget figures for fiscal year 1952 discloses that President Truman is asking four times as much money for the White House and Executive Offices as he spent two years ago. The President is asking Congress for $35,331,215 for himself, his office and operations of the White House. In 1950 the expenditures for the same functions were $8,406,888. Expenditures for 1951 are estimated at $21,261,139. The biggest amount sought for 1952 in the President's budget is a fund of $25 million for national defense emergencies which he would have blanket power to spend at his own discretion. For his own salary and expenses and for those on the White House staff, the President is asking $1,883,615, a boost of 19 per cent as compared with $1,585,553 for the current year. The President would increase the number of White House employes from 250 to 285. In

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

TWO WAYS OF DISPLAY

DEFENDING against a No Trump game contract, two diametrically different courses are available to you. One is that which you see most frequently—a race to set up cards in your own suit before the declarer can develop enough of his own. The antithesis of this is the combative procedure of striving to destroy the declarer's assets, to keep him from having a means of scoring the nine tricks he requires. This usually consists of hitting at his entries or re-entries for establishable cards in his own hand or the dummy, ordinarily the latter. Sometimes in a tournament or team match you see both methods tried.

	♠ K J 6 4 ♥ A Q J ♦ A K ♣ J 9 6 3
♠ A Q 10 9 3 ♥ K 6 ♦ 7 4 3 2 ♣ K 7	N W E S	♠ 8 7 ♥ 5 4 3 2 ♦ 9 6 5 ♣ Q 10 8 4

(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable)

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 NT	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT

One East-West pair in a team game beat that contract, through keen work by West, whereas humdrum methods at the other table enabled the declarer to make his contract and an extra trick to boot. Each time the spade 8 was led. The keen defender in the West saw the danger of the dummy's red suits, which might produce a bunch of tricks unless their sting was drawn. The club A was a sure re-entry for one or both of them.

West went after it with everything he had, taking the lead with the spade A and sending back his club K. North let that win, put his 9 on the 7, which the 10 covered, and then hopelessly played the dummy's A. He finessed the heart Q, scored the diamond A and K, fortunately dropped the heart K with the A and scored the heart J. He led the spade 6 to the 7 and 9 and West returned the Q to let the K and J win. But North's goose was now cooked. He had to give up two club tricks at the end to be down one.

In the other room, West put his 9 on the spade 8 lead and the J won. The diamond A and K scored and the club A furnished entry for the diamond Q and J, followed by the heart Q finesse, the A dropping the K and the J winning. Now the club 3 was led to the K. West also scored the spade A, but had to lead his Q to the K to give North an extra trick. The declarer willingly gave up his club J to the Q on the final trick.

Vivian Junkins Becomes Bride Of J. W. Hovatter

Ceremony Performed In St. Mary's Church

Miss Vivian Jane Junkins, 217 Cecelia Street, daughter of Mrs. Robert Dorsey, Keyser, W. Va., became the bride of Joseph Ward Hovatter, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Ward Hovatter, 720 Hill Top Drive, Sunday.

The wedding ceremony was solemnized at 10 a. m., in St. Mary's Catholic Church, with Rev. Lawrence Landrigan, pastor, officiating.

Miss Janice Dorsey was her sister's maid of honor; Mrs. Deloris Williamson, Miss Judy Grant, bridesmaids; and Sandra Dorsey, junior bridesmaid. Leo H. Hovatter served as his brother's best man while Robert Dorsey and Robert Ralph Hovatter were the ushers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin, Charles Dick, was attired in a white Chantilly lace gown, styled with basque bodice, jacket buttoned to the neckline with a small divided collar, long pointed sleeves and a long full sweeping skirt. With it she wore a bonnet style, lace coronet with scroll facing of tiny seed pearls holding her full double tiered, shoulder length, veil of bridal illusion. She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid, completing her costume.

Her attendants gowns of net were made similar to the bride's with basque bodice, matching jackets and full skirts. With them they wore bonnet style hats with tulle bows and carried bouquets of Spring flowers. The maid of honor's was in pink; Mrs. Williamson, aqua; Miss Grant, orchid and Sandra, yellow.

Mrs. Dorsey chose a dark blue dress with pink hat trimmed in flowers for her daughter's wedding. With it she wore a corsage of pink rosebuds. Mrs. Hovatter wore a blue crepe dress and coat, with matching accessories and a corsage of red rosebuds. Mrs. Joseph Blacklin, aunt of the bride, with whom she resided, was attired in a light blue crepe dress with lace bodice. She wore a matching hat and a corsage of camellias.

The bride is a graduate of Deep Creek High School and is employed by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company. The bridegroom graduated from St. Mary's School and LaSalle High School, and served as a sergeant four and one half years in the Army Air Corps with 32 months in New Guinea and the Dutch East Indies. He is employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Blacklin entertained with a wedding reception honoring their niece and her bridal party at their home, Cecelia Street, following the ceremony. The bridal motif was carried out in the decorations and the tiered wedding cage adorned with a miniature bride and bridegroom. Miss Betty Smith and Mrs. Eleanor Keady assisted in serving.

For traveling the bride wore a toast colored suit, with matching accessories and her orchid corsage. After a motor trip through Virginia Mr. and Mrs. Hovatter will reside at 733 Hill Top Drive.

Roast beef and Halogetan were served to a group of Western senators at a luncheon in the senate dining room not long ago. . . However, the Halogetan, a poisonous weed which has been killing off sheep and cattle in the West, was served only as conversation, not as food. . . Oscar Chapman and several of his aides from the Interior Department described how sheep, eating as little as a pound, die within hours after their feeding. . . Actually, Halogetan is a "Russian invasion," because the seeds from the deadly weed have been traced to Siberia!

If you wish to wear your clothes beautifully, choose your foundation carefully! Follow these suggestions.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

ONE of the first lessons every model learns is that if her figure and clothes are to form a grand alliance, a foundation garment is a necessity. And that's true no matter how perfect her figure may be.

A woman with not-so-perfect proportions should consign herself at once to an expert for advice on the selection of a foundation that will mold her figure into more nearly balanced contours.

Figure Persuasion

To correct the four most common figure problems, here are the suggestions of the corseting expert on my staff:

For the short and thin, who may be temped to go without a foundation, a snugly fitting, bantamweight girdle that rounds protruding hipbones and intruding hollows, with a bra that encourages contours. Many an average or nondescript figure has been turned into an eye-stopping beauty with just such a light-weight foundation.

For the short and heavy figure, a persuasive half-size corselet with large areas of rigid fabric supplemented with elastic that is reinforced. The alternate is a long-line brassiere with a reinforced diaphragm section, built-up back and wide straps, plus a girdle with plenty of rigid fabric and tough elastic that whittle away the curves. Be sure your foundation is long enough. Even though you are short, the extra pounds take extra length!

For the tall and thin, a slip-on corselet to sculpture the body and encourage erect posture. It can be an all-elastic type or panelled with light-weight fabric in the back, front or in both areas. Watch for three danger points! It must be long enough to "sit into" comfortably; it must not squeeze the waist, and the bra should have a contour-rounding line. As an alternate, try an all-elastic pantie girdle and bra.

Body Sculpturing

For the tall and heavy, a midriff-paring girdle that is built up above the waist, plus a firm, supporting bra that fastens to the girdle to hold the diaphragm in line. To gain figure control put your trust in plenty of stout fabric and elastic.

Are you wearing the type of foundation that will do the most for your figure? If not, you are being unfair to yourself!

ON THE LINE

By BOB CONSIDINE

PANAMA CITY (INS)—THE DEFENSE of the Panama Canal, still the greatest engineering structure in history, might well be labeled Operation Calculated Risk.

Our forces in this vitally strategic area are, on the surface, somewhat less impressive than the daily lineup of the swank and efficient Panamanian bell-hops at Panama City's impressive new El Panama Hotel, Arnold Kirkeby's most fabulous pleasure dome.

Our Air Force consists of a few trainers and several re-treaded B-17s used for search and rescue. There are no jets, no B-29s, B-50s, B-36s. We were given the bum's toss out of a number of World War II fields we built on Panama republic property, and the jungle has established firm toe-holds on the cracked and abandoned landing strips.

Our naval force consists of a few mine-layers, but nothing that can shoot hard; no subs, no battlewagons, no carriers. The rugged anti-submarine nets which stretched across the eager mouths of the canal during World War II, admitting only friends, now lie neatly stacked on a semi-shuttered naval base in the zone.

Our ground forces number less than a division, as compared to the 50,000 (plus) force that was here during the other war. And our Marine Corps arm is more finger than arm.

But no one that I've talked to in the Canal Zone—and this ranges all the way from the distinguished and efficient Lt. Gen. William H. H. Morris to a babe or two at Panama City's "Happyland"—is very concerned.

The Air Force is not worried, I gather, because it is sure Russia has no bombers with range enough to reach the vulnerable canal. It feels, too, that Russia cannot establish air bases in any of the neighboring Latin American countries because those countries are our friends and, besides, we have enough people therein to tip us off, in case the friends fail.

(But the Air Force nevertheless pines for some modern equipment, if only to keep its aim sharp.)

The Navy is not openly worried because it has reason to believe that submarine-launched guided missiles, with a-bomb war-heads, are nonexistent in Russia. Only a weapon of this sort, lobbed from a great number of miles off the mouths of the canal, would constitute a grave menace. But just to be on the extra-safe side, the Navy is bringing in some long-range Martin patrol bombers in the very near future.

● — ● — ●

The ground forces are small but superbly trained. This week they are continuing their maneuvers in the surrounding jungle . . . maneuvers calculated to season a tightly-knit defensive force in the problems of jungle warfare and defense of the canal's 12 highly vulnerable locks and the flood-gates of Gatun Lake, which, if successfully sprung, would empty the lake and close the canal for from two to four years.

(The Army figures that any enemy land invasion which could overcome its Canal Zone forces would have to be so big it would necessitate shipping which would be discovered at sea and destroyed by bombers and naval units from more plentifully supplied U. S. air fields and ports.)

Thus one finds a feeling of confidence among the military assigned to protect the canal. We have good men in the zone, professionals who can understand why Washington has been unable to send them very much in the way of ostentatious strength. They have measured carefully the possibilities of attack, military attack, and found the possibilities faint.

They know, and frankly tell you, that the only menace to the canal is sabotage. They will not agree that sabotage would be easy to perform, for it most certainly would have to be directed against well-guarded spurs on the Achilles' heel that is the canal.

But they do agree on this: That no great amount of planes, fighting men and warships sent to the canal would amount to a tinker's dam, so far as the threat of sabotage is concerned.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

ONE of the first lessons every model learns is that if her figure and clothes are to form a grand alliance, a foundation garment is a necessity. And that's true no matter how perfect her figure may be.

A woman with not-so-perfect proportions should consign herself at once to an expert for advice on the selection of a foundation that will mold her figure into more nearly balanced contours.

Figure Persuasion

To correct the four most common figure problems, here are the suggestions of the corseting expert on my staff:

For the short and thin, who may be temped to go without a foundation, a snugly fitting, bantam-weight girdle that rounds protruding hipbones and intruding hollows, with a bra that encourages contours. Many an average or non-descript figure has been turned into an eye-stopping beauty with just such a light-weight foundation.

For the short and heavy figure, a persuasive half-size corselet with large areas of rigid fabric supplemented with elastic that is reinforced. The alternate is a long-line brassiere with a reinforced diaphragm section, built-up back and wide straps, plus a girdle with plenty of rigid fabric and tough elastic that whittle away the curves. Be sure your foundation is long enough. Even though you are short, the extra pounds take extra length!

For the tall and thin, a slip-on corselet to sculpture the body and encourage erect posture. It can be an all-elastic type or panelled with light-weight fabric in the back, front or in both areas. Watch for three danger points! It must be long enough to "sit into" comfortably; it must not squeeze the waist, and the bra should have a contour-rounding line. As an alternate, try an all-elastic pantie girdle and bra.

Body Sculpturing

For the tall and heavy, a midriff-paring girdle that is built up above the waist, plus a firm, supporting bra that fastens to the girdle to hold the diaphragm in line. To gain figure control put your trust in plenty of stout fabric and elastic.

Are you wearing the type of foundation that will do the most for your figure? If not, you are being unfair to yourself!

ON THE LINE

By BOB CONSIDINE

PANAMA CITY (INS)

THE DEFENSE of the Panama Canal, still the greatest engineering structure in history, might well be labeled Operation Calculated Risk.

Our forces in this vitally strategic area are, on the surface, somewhat less impressive than the daily lineup of the swank and efficient Panamanian bell-hops at Panama City's impressive new El Panama Hotel, Arnold Kirkeby's most fabulous pleasure dome.

Our Air Force consists of a few trainers and several re-treaded B-17s used for search and rescue. There are no jets, no B-29s, B-50s, B-36s. We were given the bum's toss out of a number of World War II fields we built on Panama republic property, and the jungle has established firm toe-holds on the cracked and abandoned landing strips.

Our naval force consists of a few mine-layers, but nothing that can shoot hard; no subs, no battlewagons, no carriers. The rugged anti-submarine nets which stretched across the eager mouths of the canal during World War II, admitting only friends, now lie neatly stacked on a semi-shuttered naval base in the zone.

Our ground forces number less than a division, as compared to the 50,000 (plus) force that was here during the other war. And our Marine Corps arm is more finger than arm.

But no one that I've talked to in the Canal Zone—and this ranges all the way from the distinguished and efficient Lt. Gen. William H. H. Morris to a babe or two at Panama City's "Happyland"—is very concerned.

The Air Force is not worried, I gather, because it is sure Russia has no bombers with range enough to reach the vulnerable canal. It feels, too, that Russia cannot establish air bases in any of the neighboring Latin American countries because those countries are our friends and, besides, we have enough people therein to tip us off, in case the friends fail.

(But the Air Force nevertheless pines for some modern equipment, if only to keep its aim sharp.)

The Navy is not openly worried because it has reason to believe that submarine-launched guided missiles, with a-bomb war-heads, are non-existent in Russia. Only a weapon of this sort, lobbed from a great number of miles off the mouths of the canal, would constitute a grave menace. But just to be on the extra-safe side, the Navy is bringing in some long-range Martin patrol bombers in the very near future.

The ground forces are small but superbly trained. This week they are continuing their maneuvers in the surrounding jungle . . . maneuvers calculated to season a tightly-knit defensive force in the problems of jungle warfare and defense of the canal's 12 highly vulnerable locks and the flood-gates of Gatun Lake, which, if successfully sprung, would empty the lake and close the canal for from two to four years.

(The Army figures that any enemy land invasion which could overcome its Canal Zone forces would have to be so big it would necessitate shipping which would be discovered at sea and destroyed by bombers and naval units from more plentifully supplied U. S. air fields and ports.)

Thus one finds a feeling of confidence among the military assigned to protect the canal. We have good men in the zone, professionals who can understand why Washington has been unable to send them very much in the way of ostentatious strength. They have measured carefully the possibilities of attack, military attack, and found the possibilities faint.

They know, and frankly tell you, that the only menace to the canal is sabotage. They will not agree that sabotage would be easy to perform, for it most certainly would have to be directed against well-guarded spurs on the Achilles' heel that is the canal.

But they do agree on this: That no great amount of planes, fighting men and warships sent to the canal would amount to a tinker's dam, so far as the threat of sabotage is concerned.

First Week Of Revival Ends Successfully

The good old days of protracted revival meetings are not over, according to the Rev. C. F. Frith, pastor of the LaVale Baptist Church, who made a report yesterday on the results of the first week of the Baptist simultaneous revival campaign now in progress in 15,000 of the 18,000 church of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Six of the Western Maryland churches participating have had 96 professions of faith, 16 persons uniting with churches by letter or statement, 30 persons rededicating their lives to Christ, and two persons indicating a desire for entire full-time christian service.

The leadership of Rev. Sam W. Scantlan, of Oklahoma City, in charge of services here, and the cooperative effort of pastors and members of their congregation have combined to make the early days of the campaign successful.

The services will continue through Sunday night, April 8.

Charles Hanna Hurt In Auto Accident

A Cumberlander identified as Charles Hanna, 45, was injured Tuesday in a two-car crash on Allegany Front, about ten miles west of Keyser, W. Va.

The accident occurred on a curve as Hanna's machine, headed west, hit the automobile of Howard Authes, 49, Bear Creek, Wis. Hanna was treated at Potomac Valley Hospital, Keyser, for chest injuries.

State Police reported Hanna later was fined $15.50 by Magistrate Madelyn Bazzle for failing to keep to the right of the center of the highway. Damage to the vehicles was estimated at $400.

Another traffic mishap involving three vehicles occurred at the same place Monday afternoon, authorities said, adding:

Lester Fultz, 35, Augusta, W. Va., apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his pickup truck before it hit another truck driven by C. O. Taylor, 51, Keyser, and then crashed against the car operated by William James, 53, Wyandotte, Mich. Total damage was set at $500.

Two Area Properties Are Transferred

Two properties involving the transfer of approximately $19,000 were recorded in the land office of the Allegany County Clerk of Circuit Court.

Property on Holland Street owned by Miss Olive P. Simpson and Harry P. Simpson, trustee, was sold to Elizabeth Margaret Creegan and Elizabeth Ann Creegan for $11,500, according to land stamps.

Lots 87 and 88 in Cresap Park, together with improvements and buildings, were transferred from Alfred H. and Fay D. Benna at a reported price of approximately $7,500 to Rudolph and Geneva R. Steinberger.

Civil Defense Rehearsal Is Scheduled For Firemen

A dress rehearsal of the Allegany county civil defense program is being set up for the latter part of this month.

Lt. Virgil T. Parker, of the Cumberland Fire Department, has been named liaison officer between the city firemen and the volunteer fire companies.

Lt. Parker said yesterday at a meeting April 11 the firemen's duties in case of an A-bomb attack will be outlined.

Cumberland would be the main target area in this county in case of an attack, Lt. Parker pointed out, with the Amcelle plant of Celanese Corporation, the Luke Plant of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, and the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company as secondary targets.

Lt. Parker said the volunteer firemen will be briefed on their emergency tasks in the event the bomb would hit one or all of the strategic points.

Planned to coordinate their efforts in this rehearsal will be amateur radio operators, auxiliary and paid police, and volunteer messengers on motorcycles.

Each fire company will be assigned an area or a station next Wednesday. Lt. Parker said a police cruiser will be at each key station after the "raid."

At a meeting last week, Joseph Wenrich, official of the Cresaptown Volunteer Fire Company and a veteran in volunteer firemen's circles, was named in charge of the volunteers in the civil defense setup.

Grand Jury

Jury that the Board of Commissioners for Allegany County should be commended for the thorough manner in which they have provided for the general maintenance, repairs and improvements of the County properties, and for their foresight in budgeting the expenditures for these improvements over a period of four years. At the completion of this program, all of the County buildings should be in a state of repair and maintenance that will equal or better any other county in our State.

THIRD — A committee from our body visited and inspected the Allegany County Home and found 15 white female patients, and one colored female patient; 30-white male patients and no colored male patients. We found conditions generally good and received no complaints from the patients in this section. Any recommendations for improvements that we might make are included in the program which was explained to us by the Allegany County Commissioners, with the exception of repainting all rooms in the north and west sections of the male quarters and the repairing of numerous small holes in the celling and walls in some of the rooms, which seem to be caused by the removal of pipes and fixtures. We suggest that these minor repairs should be made immediately. Some of the beds need new springs and mattresses and this need also should be given immediate attention.

We are informed that three-shift firemen are employed and also a relief fireman is available at all times for duty. The grading and reseeding of the lawn on the south side of the County Home has not been provided for in the long-range planning and should be done. The road leading to the County Home from Furnace Street is in a very bad shape and is full of chuck holes and should be repaired as soon as possible.

FOURTH—A committee from our body made an inspection of Sylvan Retreat, the County Hospital for the Insane. There is a total of 88 patients in this institution; of which 52 are female and 36 male. There are no colored patients. There are 28 employes. In the men's section, we found that the floors and walls have been recently refinished and were in excellent condition. However, in the women's section, while it was in a clean and sanitary condition, the walls were in need of repairs as a result of holes in the plaster and the paint is soiled and scaling off. However, this is covered in the proposed plan for the improvements in this building. The patients were questioned and stated that they are contented and that they receive good food. An inspection of the pantry showed that it was well stocked with first-class provisions.

FIFTH—A committee from our body inspected the Allegany County Infirmary and found 97 patients — all white. There are 55 female patients and 42 male patients. There are employed at this institution 67 persons, consisting of the Superintendent, Supervisor of Nurses, and the following staff: five registered nurses, 32 practical nurses, five orderlies, two maids, one janitor, one fireman, seven kitchen attendants, seven laundry workers, six tray girls and one secretary. The general physical conditions at the Infirmary were good and nothing was found by your committee to criticize in connection with cleanliness, good order of the building, its staff or inmates. It was noted that there was a water leak in the men's rest room on the first floor. The ceiling of the stairway on the second floor is in a bad state, due to a water leak coming from faulty pipes. In the room established for the kitchen help, the walls were damp and in a bad shape as a result apparently from a leak within the wall. These conditions should be remedied immediately. While the hot water system appears to be adequate, it is not operating in an efficient manner to produce the hot water needed and it is felt by your committee that some repairs or adjustment should be made to this system to assure maximum efficiency.

SIXTH—The Grand Jury in a body visited the Allegany County Jail and found seven male prisoners. The condition of the Jail is clean, orderly and well managed. The repairs needed in the Jail are provided for in the long-range plan which has been adopted by the Allegany County Commissioners. We commend Sheriff Edward R. Muir and his deputies for the excellent manner in which this institution is governed and also for its general maintenance in view of the age of this building.

SEVENTH — A committee from our body inspected the books in the office of the County Treasurer and reports that the records of the County's finances, as shown to by them Mrs. Wilbur S. Sills, who has them in her charge, are well and intelligently cared for and we believe commendation is due Mrs. Sills for the manner in which these records are kept and made available for inspection. We also wish to commend the County Treasurer, Fred Dreyer, for the efficient manner in which the records of the County Treasurer's Office are kept.

EIGHTH — The Mine Inspectors for Allegany County appeared before our body and reported that no serious violations existed with regard to the mining laws.

NINTH—We had before our body Acting Fire Chief Jerimiah T. Defibaugh and questioned him with regard to existing fire hazards in the City of Cumberland and he reported that there were no violations to bring to our attention at this time.

TENTH—We had before our body the Sheriff of Allegany County; Commissioner of Fire and Police for the City of Cumberland, John Long; and police department heads of Cumberland, Frostburg, Westernport, Barton, Lonaconing, and Luke, and a number of constables. They informed us of some violations, as a result of which two indictments have been returned by this body. The Chief of Police of Cumberland reported that the Police Department is seriously undermanned at the present time. However, we feel that this is a matter for the attention of the Mayor and City Council rather than for the Grand Jury.

ELEVENTH—The Grand Jury in a body made an inspection of the Allegany County Court House and report that the floor of the County Agent's Office is in a very bad state of disrepair and should be immediately replaced. Our body also feels that the entrance-way to the Court House should be kept meticulously clean and the brass on the doors polished, so that a very favorable impression is made upon those entering. We also note that the howitzer erected on the Court House lawn is badly in need of painting. It is also recommended that the entrance to the toilet adjoining the small court room on the second floor of the Court House should be leveled so that persons entering will not trip or fall. The ceiling of the men's toilet on the third floor is badly disintegrated and should be replastered at once. The inside of the Court House generally needs repainting but we understand that this is provided for in the long-range plan for repairs and improvements, which has heretofore been referred to.

TWELFTH — We wish to commend Mr. Alvin Snyder, the custodian of the Court House, for the condition in which we found the premises, so far as cleanliness and order is concerned.

THIRTEENTH—The Grand Jury wishes to commend Mr. Paul M. Fletcher, State's Attorney, for the very efficient and able manner in which he presented matters before this Grand Jury. This body finds that both the State's Attorney and Terrence J. Boyle, County Investigator, have conducted their respective duties most diligently and efficiently and all items pertaining to criminal offenses and other cases have been promptly handled by investigations. We also wish to commend Mr. Fletcher for the fair and impartial methods employed in serving the people of this County and the excellent conduct of his office in general, as well as his service and splendid assistance rendered during the April term of this Grand Jury. We also wish to thank Mr. Joseph E. Boden, Clerk of the Court, and Court attaches for the assistance they rendered us during this Grand Jury.

Having completed our duties and rendered an accounting of our work, we respectfully request to be excused.

Less Dirt, Smoke

The new recovery unit also is expected to reduce the amount of dirt and smoke usually associated with such operations. The precipitator unit on the stack will recover daily about 15 tons of fly ash, greatly reducing the quantity of fumes and dust previously released into the atmosphere by the old rotary furnaces.

In addition to the production and recovery advantages of the smelter unit, plant officials explained that the new equipment adds considerably to the steam-producing capacity of the plant.

Although the smelter was the major project of the past year, another improvement of importance was the consolidation of the paper sheeting and trimming operations in the building formerly occupied by the Old Coating Mill. This new finishing department gives the plant a line of ten cutters and eight trimmers, all located in the same building.

Another project of major economic significance is contemplated in the near future, the rebuilding of No. 6 and 7 paper machines, the largest of seven operated at Luke. This project will allow paper to be manufactured at around 1,200 feet per minute, compared to present speeds of about 550 feet per minute. These two machines were converted a few years ago to the manufacture of machine coated book paper, but at present lack the speed necessary to make this grade profitably.

In a letter announcing the change to employes, A. M. Kaiser, manager of the Luke mill, commented: "It took time, hard work, risk and a great deal of money to embark on this program. It will continue to take time, work, risk and money to keep it going. We need your cooperation to make it work. If we have that, and the program succeeds, it means that the Luke mill is on its way toward resuming its old position as a leader in the industry — and that the economic future of this community is much brighter."

Three questions to ask about any automatic drive—

Before you buy any new car today, ask these questions about its automatic drive . . .

Does it end clutch-pushing and gear-shifting? If the answer is "No," then it isn't as simple and smooth and safe as a modern automatic drive should be. (In Packard Ultramatic, there's no clutch-pushing—and no gear-shifting.)

Can I rock it in snow, sand or mud? If the answer is "No," then it isn't as flexible as it should be. (With Packard Ultramatic Drive, you can change instantly from Forward to Reverse.)

Does it cruise in solid, direct drive? If the answer is "No," then it isn't as efficient as it should be. (Packard Ultramatic Drive lets you cruise in solid, direct drive at all cruising speeds.)

On these three counts—and on every count—Packard's exclusive Ultramatic Drive leads the field. Come in—drive it!

This project will allow paper to be manufactured at around 1,200 feet per minute, compared to present speeds of about 550 feet per minute. These two machines were converted a few years ago to the manufacture of machine coated book paper, but at present lack the speed necessary to make this grade profitably.

In a letter announcing the change to employes, A. M. Kaiser, manager of the Luke mill, commented: "It took time, hard work, risk and a great deal of money to embark on this program. It will continue to take time, work, risk and money to keep it going. We need your cooperation to make it work. If we have that, and the program succeeds, it means that the Luke mill is on its way toward resuming its old position as a leader in the industry — and that the economic future of this community is much brighter."

Three questions to ask about any automatic drive—

Before you buy any new car today, ask these questions about its automatic drive . . .

Does it end clutch-pushing and gear-shifting? If the answer is "No," then it isn't as simple and smooth and safe as a modern automatic drive should be. (In Packard Ultramatic, there's no clutch-pushing—and no gear-shifting.)

Can I rock it in snow, sand or mud? If the answer is "No," then it isn't as flexible as it should be. (With Packard Ultramatic Drive, you can change instantly from Forward to Reverse.)

Does it cruise in solid, direct drive? If the answer is "No," then it isn't as efficient as it should be. (Packard Ultramatic Drive lets you cruise in solid, direct drive at all cruising speeds.)

On these three counts—and on every count—Packard's exclusive Ultramatic Drive leads the field. Come in—drive it!

Jury that the Board of Commissioners for Allegany County should be commended for the thorough manner in which they have provided for the general maintenance, repairs and improvements of the County properties, and for their foresight in budgeting the expenditures for these improvements over a period of four years. At the completion of this program, all of the County buildings should be in a state of repair and maintenance that will equal or better any other county in our State.

THIRD — A committee from our body visited and inspected the Allegany County Home and found 15 white female patients, and one colored female patient; 30-white male patients and no colored male patients. We found conditions generally good and received no complaints from the patients in this section. Any recommendations for improvements that we might make are included in the program which was explained to us by the Allegany County Commissioners, with the exception of repainting all rooms in the north and west sections of the male quarters and the repairing of numerous small holes in the ceiling and walls in some of the rooms, which seem to be caused by the removal of pipes and fixtures. We suggest that these minor repairs should be made immediately. Some of the beds need new springs and mattresses and this need also should be given immediate attention.

We are informed that three-shift firemen are employed and also a relief fireman is available at all times for duty. The grading and reseeding of the lawn on the south side of the County Home has not been provided for in the long-range planning and should be done. The road leading to the County Home from Furnace Street is in a very bad shape and is full of chuck holes and should be repaired as soon as possible.

FOURTH—A committee from our body made an inspection of Sylvan Retreat, the County Hospital for the Insane. There is a total of 88 patients in this institution; of which 52 are female and 36 male. There are no colored patients. There are 28 employes. In the men's section, we found that the floors and walls have been recently refinished and were in excellent condition. However, in the women's section, while it was in a clean and sanitary condition, the walls were in need of repairs as a result of holes in the plaster and the paint is soiled and scaling off. However, this is covered in the proposed plan for the improvements in this building. The patients were questioned and stated that they are contented and that they receive good food. An inspection of the pantry showed that it was well stocked with first-class provisions.

FIFTH—A committee from our body inspected the Allegany County Infirmary and found 97 patients — all white. There are 55 female patients and 42 male patients. There are employed at this institution 67 persons, consisting of the Superintendent, Supervisor of Nurses, and the following staff: five registered nurses, 32 practical nurses, five orderlies, two maids, one janitor, one fireman, seven kitchen attendants, seven laundry workers, six tray girls and one secretary. The general physical conditions at the Infirmary were good and nothing was found by your committee to criticize in connection with cleanliness, good order of the building, its staff or inmates. It was noted that there was a water leak in the men's rest room on the first floor. The ceiling of the stairway on the second floor is in a bad state, due to a water leak coming from faulty pipes. In the room established for the kitchen help, the walls were damp and in a bad shape as a result apparently from a leak within the wall. These conditions should be remedied immediately. While the hot water system appears to be adequate, it is not operating in an efficient manner to produce the hot water needed and it is felt by your committee that some repairs or adjustment should be made to this system to assure maximum efficiency.

SIXTH—The Grand Jury in a body visited the Allegany County Jail and found seven male prisoners. The condition of the Jail is clean, orderly and well managed. The repairs needed in the Jail are provided for in the long-range plan which has been adopted by the Allegany County Commissioners. We commend Sheriff Edward R. Muir and his deputies for the excellent manner in which this institution is governed and also for its general maintenance in view of the age of this building.

SEVENTH — A committee from our body inspected the books in the office of the County Treasurer and reports that the records of the County's finances, as shown to by them Mrs. Wilbur S. Sills, who has them in her charge, are well and intelligently cared for and we believe commendation is due Mrs. Sills for the manner in which these records are kept and made available for inspection. We also wish to commend the County Treasurer, Fred Dreyer, for the efficient manner in which the records of the County Treasurer's Office are kept.

EIGHTH — The Mine Inspectors for Allegany County appeared before our body and reported that no serious violations existed with regard to the mining laws.

NINTH—We had before our body Acting Fire Chief Jerimiah T. Defibaugh and questioned him with regard to existing fire hazards in the City of Cumberland and he reported that there were no violations to bring to our attention at this time.

TENTH—We had before our body the Sheriff of Allegany County; Commissioner of Fire and Police for the City of Cumberland, John Long; and police department heads of Cumberland, Frostburg, Westernport, Barton, Lonaconing, and Luke, and a number of constables. They informed us of some violations, as a result of which two indictments have been returned by this body. The Chief of Police of Cumberland reported that the Police Department is seriously undermanned at the present time. However, we feel that this is a matter for the attention of the Mayor and City Council rather than for the Grand Jury.

ELEVENTH—The Grand Jury in a body made an inspection of the Allegany County Court House and report that the floor of the County Agent's Office is in a very bad state of disrepair and should be immediately replaced. Our body also feels that the entrance-way to the Court House should be kept meticulously clean and the brass on the doors polished, so that a very favorable impression is made upon those entering. We also note that the howitzer erected on the Court House lawn is badly in need of painting. It is also recommended that the entrance to the toilet adjoining the small court room on the second floor of the Court House should be leveled so that persons entering will not trip or fall. The ceiling of the men's toilet on the third floor is badly disintegrated and should be replastered at once. The inside of the Court House generally needs repainting but we understand that this is provided for in the long-range plan for repairs and improvements, which has heretofore been referred to.

TWELFTH — We wish to commend Mr. Alvin Snyder, the custodian of the Court House, for the condition in which we found the premises, so far as cleanliness and order is concerned.

THIRTEENTH—The Grand Jury wishes to commend Mr. Paul M. Fletcher, State's Attorney, for the very efficient and able manner in which he presented matters before this Grand Jury. This body finds that both the State's Attorney and Terrence J. Boyle, County Investigator, have conducted their respective duties most diligently and efficiently and all items pertaining to criminal offenses and other cases have been promptly handled by investigations. We also wish to commend Mr. Fletcher for the fair and impartial methods employed in serving the people of this County and the excellent conduct of his office in general, as well as his service and splendid assistance rendered during the April term of this Grand Jury. We also wish to thank Mr. Joseph E. Boden, Clerk of the Court, and Court attaches for the assistance they rendered us during this Grand Jury.

Having completed our duties and rendered an accounting of our work, we respectfully request to be excused.

New Recovery

Less Dirt, Smoke

The new recovery unit also is expected to reduce the amount of dirt and smoke usually associated with such operations. The precipitator unit on the stack will recover daily about 15 tons of fly ash, greatly reducing the quantity of fumes and dust previously released into the atmosphere by the old rotary furnaces.

In addition to the production and recovery advantages of the smelter unit, plant officials explained that the new equipment adds considerably to the steam-producing capacity of the plant.

Although the smelter was the major project of the past year, another improvement of importance was the consolidation of the paper sheeting and trimming operations in the building formerly occupied by the Old Coating Mill. This new finishing department gives the plant a line of ten cutters and eight trimmers, all located in the same building.

Another project of major economic significance is contemplated in the near future, the rebuilding of No. 6 and 7 paper machines, the largest of seven operated at Luke. This project will allow paper to be manufactured at around 1,200 feet per minute, compared to present speeds of about 550 feet per minute. These two machines were converted a few years ago to the manufacture of machine coated book paper, but at present lack the speed necessary to make this grade profitably.

In a letter announcing the change to employes, A. M. Kaiser, manager of the Luke mill, commented: "It took time, hard work, risk and a great deal of money to embark on this program. It will continue to take time, work, risk and money to keep it going. We need your cooperation to make it work. If we have that, and the program succeeds, it means that the Luke mill is on its way toward resuming its old position as a leader in the industry — and that the economic future of this community is much brighter."

B. & O. Freight Traffic Shows Gain In March

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad reported that its March freight traffic was the heaviest since August and near the four-year peak month.

March loadings of 293,876 cars increased 62,916 over the shorter month of February when business was disrupted by the switchmen's strike and a one-week long coal miners' walkout in West Virginia. It also exceeded by 38,721 cars the total for March last year.

Increases were shown last month in nearly all classes of traffic. Coal loadings rose to 66,429 cars from 65,585 a year earlier and steel traffic increased to 18,614 cars from 14,032.

Total March loadings came within a short distance of the peaks of 294,077 cars for August last year and 294,458 for October, 1948. With those two exceptions, last month's freight traffic was the heaviest since May, 1947, when the total was 303,653.

B. & O. Freight Traffic Shows Gain In March

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad reported that its March freight traffic was the heaviest since August and near the four-year peak month.

March loadings of 293,876 cars increased 62,916 over the shorter month of February when business was disrupted by the switchmen's strike and a one-week long coal miners' walkout in West Virginia. It also exceeded by 38,721 cars the total for March last year.

Increases were shown last month in nearly all classes of traffic. Coal loadings rose to 66,429 cars from 65,585 a year earlier and steel traffic increased to 18,614 cars from 14,632.

Total March loadings came within a short distance of the peaks of 294,077 cars for August last year and 294,458 for October, 1948. With those two exceptions, last month's freight traffic was the heaviest since May, 1947, when the total was 303,653.

Billions Of Germs Found On Hands Of Those Handling Food For Public

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Millions to billions of germs are found on the supposedly-clean hands of people handling food in public eating places, a new study reported today.

Many of the germs are undesirable, and some may cause disease, it said. In one case, dysentery bacilli were found.

The study was made by Prof. Murray P. Horwood and Virgil A. Minch of the Department of Civil and Sanitary Engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Their results, they declared, show that a much greater educational campaign is needed to teach food handlers in restaurants, drugstores, bars and other places how to keep their hands clean. It might be wise to require examinations in hygiene and sanitation before licensing food handlers, they said.

"It is certain that real and lasting progress will not be made until management assumes the responsibility for daily education and supervision" of persons handling food.

The tests were made on 34 men and women preparing or handling food in 22 public eating places in Boston and Cambridge.

Taken directly from their work, these people washed their hands for one minute in sterile, buffered water. The water then was examined to see how many and what kinds of germs had come from their hands.

From 300 to 16,000,000 germs were counted in as little as a thousandth of a quart of water after the germs were incubated for 48 hours at body temperature.

Many of the bacteria apparently came from the foods being handled or processed, they said, but others came from the workers.

The hand cleanliness is especially important, Dr. Horwood said, because more than 7,000,000 people eat at least one meal a day outside their homes, and public establishments serve more than 20 billion meals a year. There are more than 160,000 food establishments, plus some 80,000 bars and taverns that serve meals and nearly 40,000 drug stores with soda fountains.

Kerr Would Abolish Capital Custom—The Cocktail Hour

By FRANCIS E. KELLY

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Sen. Robert S. Kerr, a non-bourbon Democrat from constitutionally dry Oklahoma, proposed today that cocktail parties be abolished as a Washington institution.

"The capital social slogan is, 'Let's have a drink,'" he told the folks back home in a news letter.

While the towering former governor didn't offer his proposal in the form of legislation, he left no doubt where he stood personally on the issue.

"I just don't see why every kind of business (monkey or serious) has to be mixed with a drink," he said. "But that's about the case when two or more people get together at anything less formal than a session of Congress or a White House ceremony."

Kerr said the Women's Christian Temperance Union had informed him that the "collective guzzling" in the nation's capital ran up per capita consumption of liquor to 4.44 gallons in 1949, compared with a nationwide average of 1.14 gallons. (Washington, 100 per cent urban and with a relatively low liquor tax, lies between Maryland and Virginia where the price is higher, and consequently attracts considerable out-of-town trade. It also is the site of numerous conventions, and a magnet for tourists.)

The Senator declared he is "neither long-faced nor any professional reformer."

"I enjoy good humor just as much as the next fellow, but I do have some very definite ideas about the economic and physical evils of alcohol," he said.

"Hard liquor dulls the wits and clouds the vision, no doubt about that. And official Washington must be at its best when the lives of our men are at stake and the future of the nation hangs in the balance. If we ever did need clear thinking, we need it now."

Kerr's home state recently rejected a proposal to remove prohibition from the Oklahoma constitution. Liquor, however, is not entirely unknown among Kerr's constituents. The following toast recently appeared in one of the state's leading newspapers:

"Pure water is the best of gifts
"That man to man may bring.
"But who am I that I should have
"The best of anything?
"Let princes revel at the pump,
"Let peers with ponds make free—
"Bourbon, gin, and rye, and Scotch
"Are good enough for me."

When peace is distant the military despots speak lovingly of peace. But when peace presses close, then the despots would murder peace.
—John Foster Dulles, U. S. Ambassador.

the chicaneries of those in office. The story goes that this committee confers with Deputy Attorney General Peyton Ford, or as another account has it, Ford's task is to see that no new Alger Hiss case breaks. The Department of Justice is designed to be a law enforcement, not a political, agency.

Precisely what happened to the Tydings Committee is that it submitted to executive pressure. That is why I have said that the McCarthy charges stand. The Tydings Committee did not investigate them. When its counsel, Edward Morgan, came to my house, he told me the story as it never was permitted to be told to his committee. And there was little difference between the story he told me and that which Senator Joe McCarthy was shouting from the housetops. Someone reached that committee to kill the evidence.

I am not convinced that the inadequate functioning of the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities is altogether fortuitous. Something queer goes on when a witness like Larry Parks is shut off by a bell when he provides evidence which the committee badly needs to make its case. It looks as though someone were waiting for that bell to ring—and that someone was not Larry Parks.

This column has been supporting this committee since it was organized. But if it plays such tricks as I have described, it must be shown up for what it is. A committee which does not do its work properly should not exist.

Kerr Would Abolish Capital Custom—The Cocktail Hour

By FRANCIS E. KELLY

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Sen. Robert S. Kerr, a non-bourbon Democrat from constitutionally dry Oklahoma, proposed today that cocktail parties be abolished as a Washington institution.

"The capital social slogan is, 'Let's have a drink,'" he told the folks back home in a news letter.

While the towering former governor didn't offer his proposal in the form of legislation, he left no doubt where he stood personally on the issue.

"I just don't see why every kind of business (monkey or serious) has to be mixed with a drink," he said. "But that's about the case when two or more people get together at anything less formal than a session of Congress or a White House ceremony."

Kerr said the Women's Christian Temperance Union had informed him that the "collective guzzling" in the nation's capital ran up per capita consumption of liquor to 4.44 gallons in 1949, compared with a nationwide average of 1.14 gallons.

(Washington, 100 per cent urban and with a relatively low liquor tax, lies between Maryland and Virginia where the price is higher, and consequently attracts considerable out-of-town trade. It also is the site of numerous conventions, and a magnet for tourists.)

The Senator declared he is "neither long-faced nor any professional reformer."

"I enjoy good humor just as much as the next fellow, but I do have some very definite ideas about the economic and physical evils of alcohol," he said.

"Hard liquor dulls the wits and clouds the vision, no doubt about that. And official Washington must be at its best when the lives of our men are at stake and the future of the nation hangs in the balance. If we ever did need clear thinking, we need it now."

Kerr's home state recently rejected a proposal to remove prohibition from the Oklahoma constitution. Liquor, however, is not entirely unknown among Kerr's constituents. The following toast recently appeared in one of the state's leading newspapers:

"Pure water is the best of gifts
"That man to man may bring.
"But who am I that I should have
"The best of anything?
"Let princes revel at the pump,
"Let peers with ponds make free—
"Bourbon, gin, and rye, and Scotch
"Are good enough for me."

When peace is distant the military despots speak lovingly of peace. But when peace presses close, then the despots would murder peace.
—John Foster Dulles, U. S. Ambassador.

the chicaneries of those in office. The story goes that this committee confers with Deputy Attorney General Peyton Ford, or as another account has it, Ford's task is to see that no new Alger Hiss case breaks. The Department of Justice is designed to be a law enforcement, not a political, agency.

Precisely what happened to the Tydings Committee is that it submitted to executive pressure. That is why I have said that the McCarthy charges stand. The Tydings Committee did not investigate them. When its counsel, Edward Morgan, came to my house, he told me the story as it never was permitted to be told to his committee. And there was little difference between the story he told me and that which Senator Joe McCarthy was shouting from the housetops. Someone reached that committee to kill the evidence.

I am not convinced that the inadequate functioning of the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities is altogether fortuitous. Something queer goes on when a witness like Larry Parks is shut off by a bell when he provides evidence which the committee badly needs to make its case. It looks as though someone were waiting for that bell to ring—and that someone was not Larry Parks.

This column has been supporting this committee since it was organized. But if it plays such tricks as I have described, it must be shown up for what it is. A committee which does not do its work properly should not exist.

Beightol's led all the way although outscored from the field 21-20. The winners converted 15 of 19 free throws to Garlitz's six of eight. Lynn Beightol with 12 and Frank Phares with 15 markers topped the attack. Moran had 13 and Mullaney 12 for the losers.

Paced by Bill Hawkins and Don Blank with 13 points apiece the Fearless Five surged ahead in the final half after trailing 24-20 at intermission. The Fearless Five and Beightol's Bouncers will meet in the finals tonight at 8 p. m.

Meder's converted 11 of 17 fouls to stay in the game until late in the third period. Ronnie Sisk paced the losers with 11 tallies.

In the 135-pound division Happy Hills took the measure of the U. S. Naval Reserve team 50-45 and gained the right to play Diehl's Confectionery in the 7 p. m. finals tonight.

Punk Valentine netted 15 points and George McGregor 13 to top the winners' attack while Paul Fisher tallied 20 markers for the Reserves.

The Tip Toppers advanced to the final day with a 38-22 decision over Joan's Crusaders in the 115-pound class. They will meet The Spotters tonight at 6 o'clock in the opener of the program. Galen McGregor and Jackie Long each had nine points for the winners.

Winding up tonight's schedule will be the Senior Division quints—Parkers A. C. and Forty and Eight, both of whom were idle last night.

Repetoire Scores Experimental Win

NEW YORK, April 4 (INS)—Mrs. N. A. Mikell's chestnut colt Repetoire scored a smashing victory today in the first section of the $20,000 Experimental Free Handicap at Jamaica.

With Battlefield, the overnight favorite, scratched because of the off track and large field, Repetoire finished three quarters of a length ahead of Ralph Lowe's Pictus, which in turn had a neck margin over Rubin Kowall's Pur Sang.

Two blocked punts converted into scores enabled Allegany High School's Varsity eleven to down the Seniors yesterday at Campobello, 20-0, in the annual Alco spring football game. The contest marked the end of spring drills under Coach Bob Pence.

After a scoreless initial quarter in which the High School squad was twice stopped deep in Senior territory by fumbles peppery George "Brindle" Long blocked a punt and Rick Schramm recovered on the Senior's 14-yard line and Charley Eirich raced around left end for the first touchdown in the second period.

The second blocked kick came in the third stanza when Dick Widdows and Lance Statler got in front of Gene Horton's boot and Ralph Shaffer recovered for the Varsity on the Seniors' 3. Quarterback Ronnie Lease took it over on a sneak through center and Widdows converted.

A 60-yard Senior drive was halted on the Varsity four as the final period got underway and then with Bob Hook and Eugene Horton alternating at carrying the pigskin the winners marched to their final tally. Dick Rank took it over from the one. Widdows converted to complete the scoring.

The Seniors played without the services of three regulars, Ken Birmingham, Bernard Spencer and Bob Anderson who are in the U. S. Marine Corps. Horton and Hook both played in the Senior backfield.

All-State tackle Don Fletcher nd Ronnie Chapman were outstanding for the Seniors while Ronnie Sisk, playing at fullback, bore the brunt of the Varsity attack with able assistance from Eirich and Ray Easton. In the Varsity line, Bernie Beerman, Bill Robeson and Schramm were best. The Lineups:

Fort Hill Girls And Boys Score In Bowling Tourney

Five Teams Vie Here In Handicap Event

Five Cumberland bowling teams participated in the American Junior Bowling Congress' 6th Annual Handicap Tournament the past weekend on the Club Recreation alleys where the Fort Hill boys rolling under the banner of "Hilltoppers" and the Fort Hill girls under the name of "Sentinels" captured top honors in their respective divisions.

Two LaSalle teams known as McIntyre's Grocery and Nave's Market finished in that order in the boys' division. The other girls' team was the Liberty Belles from St. Mary's High.

The tournament is commonly called the "AJBC Telegraphic Tournament" with all AJBC teams bowling in their home towns and sending the scores into Chicago for comparison.

The Hilltoppers carried an enormous handicap of 726 pins but easily defeated the other two entries. The total team score including handicap was 2,948. McIntyre's was second with 2,440 and Nave's Market, third, 2,311. Bill Sites and Bill Hunt topped the Hilltoppers with sets of 478 and 473. Tommy Keech led the Grocers with 463 while Jack Vocke of the Marketeers posted a 198-535 for the highest set in the Cumberland tournament without handicap.

In the girls' division, the Sentinels carried a 780 total handicap but won with 2,234. Jeanne Miller's 334 was high. The Liberty Belles from St. Mary's had a very low handicap of 86 pins per game. Lois Nehring was high for the Belles with a 127 single and 355 total, the highest girls' series in the tourney here.

Al Simmons, Indians Coach, Quits Baseball

Ill Health Forces Move After 26 Years

TUCSON, Ariz., April 4 (AP)—Al Simmons tearfully told Cleveland Manager Al Lopez today, "I can't help you any longer," and quit major league baseball for the first time in 26 years.

AL SIMMONS

In his time one of baseball's greatest hitters—he has a lifetime batting average of .334 — Simmons resigned as the Indians' third base coach because of poor health.

"I'm going home to see my doctor in Milwaukee and find out what's wrong with me," said the 47-year-old Simmons who was born Al Szymanski in that town. "I'm finished for this year."

It is believed that Charles (Red) Ruffing, ex-Yankee pitching star and now roving coach for Cleveland, will be appointed to fill the vacancy left by Simmons.

His poor health, friends say, added to a number of personal problems, has depressed him a great deal.

He also has had trouble getting into condition. When he dieted from time to time to take off excess weight, he was left physically weak.

Simmons joined the Indians in 1950 and coached third base under Manager Lou Boudreau. When Lopez replaced Boudreau, general manager Hank Greenberg told him to keep Simmons.

Simmons first left the Athletics in 1933, when Connie Mack broke up his great team. Then he played with Chicago, Washington, Detroit, the Boston Red Sox, Cincinnati, the A's again, and the Boston Braves.

After the Braves, he coached for the Athletics for six seasons before coming to Cleveland.

New York Wins Series

The New York Knickerbockers captured the semi-final series from Syracuse last night by downing the latter five 83 to 81 at New York, winning three games to two.

County League Elects Officers

Softball Loop Adopts 35-Game Schedule

Earl Nonnemann was elected president of the County Softball League last night at a meeting at the Corriganville American Legion home and a 35-game schedule for the 1951 season was adopted by the eight-team circuit.

Also named to office for the new season were Dale Broadwater, vice president; Chester DeHaven, treasurer; and Bill Conn, secretary.

One new team was represented at the confab, with seven holdover squads being present. Green's Chevrolet, winner of the Frostburg Softball League title last year, will be a new entry into the loop replacing Narrows Park which has indicated it will not renew its franchise.

Also represented were Corriganville, Ellerslie, Hyndman, Potomac Valley, Stringtown, Wellersburg, and LaVale.

Bill Conn announced last night the next meeting will be held Thursday, April 12, at the Corriganville Legion home at 8 p.m. Fifty dollar forfeit fees will be posted at this meeting, Conn said.

The 35-game schedule adopted by the league will begin April 30 with games every Monday and Thursday. The schedule will end either May 27 or 28, Conn said. A Shaughnessy playoff has also been adopted for the championship.

Mounties Postpone Opening Ball Games

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., April 4 (AP)—West Virginia University announced today the postponement of the first two games of its 1951 baseball season, which had been scheduled here Friday and Saturday against Virginia Tech.

Athletic Director Roy M. Hawley said the two games will be played as a doubleheader on Virginia Tech's home diamond at Blacksburg, Va., May 1.

Mason-Dixon Champs Play Here On Sunday

Cumberland's Spas didn't pick a "pushover" to close their 1950-51 season when they scheduled Mount St. Mary's College of Emmitsburg for Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock on SS. Peter and Paul court.

The Mounts from Frederick County not only won the Mason-Dixon Conference championship this year but they knocked off St. Francis College of Loretto, Pa., which holds two decisions over the Spas.

The Mason-Dixon Conference in which the Mounts copped basketball honors comprises such schools as Catholic U., American U., Western Maryland, Washington Colleges, Delaware U., Johns Hopkins, Towson Teachers, Baltimore Loyola, Bridgewater, Gallaudet, Randolph-Macon and Hampden-Sydney.

Beat Spas Twice

Local cage fans will recall that "Skip" Hughes' St. Francis quint whipped Keegan's club here by scores of 64-55 and 85-72.

St. Francis, regarded as one of the top teams in the tri-state district which included W. & J., Waynesburg, West Virginia and Duquesne, entered the National Catholic Tournament at Albany, N. Y., and was ushered out in a hurry by Mt. St. Mary's to the tune of 83-74. The Mounts won their tourney opener, defeating St. Norbert's of Wisconsin, 91-59, but lost out in the semi-finals to Seattle.

Cosgrove Scoring Ace

Les Cosgrove, Mt. St. Mary's scoring ace, racked up over 30 points a game in his team's two wins in the Albany tourney.

So it looks like the Spas have picked a tartar for a grand finale.

Bullock Leads Field

BIRMINGHAM, April 4 (AP) — Fred Bullock, 31 year old Birmingham golfer, led 97 qualifiers in the Dunlop $5,880 golf tournament today with 70-73—143 for 36 of the 90 holes to be played. Bullock was a shot ahead of Tom Haliburton of Scotland.

Two blocked punts converted into scores enabled Allegany High School's Varsity eleven to down the Seniors yesterday at Campobello, 20-0, in the annual Alco spring football game. The contest marked the end of spring drills under Coach Bob Pence.

After a scoreless initial quarter in which the High School squad was twice stopped deep in Senior territory by fumbles peppery George "Brindle" Long blocked a punt and Rick Schramm recovered on the Senior's 14-yard line and Charley Eirich raced around left end for the first touchdown in the second period.

The second blocked kick came in the third stanza when Dick Widdows and Lance Statler got in front of Gene Horton's boot and Ralph Shaffer recovered for the Varsity on the Seniors' 3. Quarterback Ronnie Lease took it over on a sneak through center and Widdows converted.

A 60-yard Senior drive was halted on the Varsity four as the final period got underway and then with Bob Hook and Eugene Horton alternating at carrying the pigskin the winners marched to their final tally. Dick Rank took it over from the one. Widdows converted to complete the scoring.

The Seniors played without the services of three regulars, Ken Birmingham, Bernard Spencer and Bob Anderson who are in the U. S. Marine Corps. Horton and Hook both played in the Senior backfield.

All-State tackle Don Fletcher nd Ronnie Chapman were outstanding for the Seniors while Ronnie Sisk, playing at fullback, bore the brunt of the Varsity attack with able assistance from Eirich and Ray Easton. In the Varsity line, Bernie Beerman, Bill Robeson and Schramm were best. The Lineups:

Fort Hill Girls And Boys Score In Bowling Tourney

Five Teams Vie Here In Handicap Event

Five Cumberland bowling teams participated in the American Junior Bowling Congress' 6th Annual Handicap Tournament the past weekend on the Club Recreation alleys where the Fort Hill boys rolling under the banner of "Hilltoppers" and the Fort Hill girls under the name of "Sentinels" captured top honors in their respective divisions.

Two LaSalle teams known as McIntyre's Grocery and Nave's Market finished in that order in the boys' division. The other girls' team was the Liberty Belles from St. Mary's High.

The tournament is commonly called the "AJBC Telegraphic Tournament" with all AJBC teams bowling in their home towns and sending the scores into Chicago for comparison.

The Hilltoppers carried an enormous handicap of 726 pins but easily defeated the other two entries. The total team score including handicap was 2,948. McIntyre's was second with 2,440 and Nave's Market, third, 2,311. Bill Sites and Bill Hunt topped the Hilltoppers with sets of 478 and 473. Tommy Keech led the Grocers with 463 while Jack Vocke of the Marketeers posted a 198-535 for the highest set in the Cumberland tournament without handicap.

In the girls' division, the Sentinels carried a 780 total handicap but won with 2,234. Jeanne Miller's 334 was high. The Liberty Belles from St. Mary's had a very low handicap of 86 pins per game. Lois Nehring was high for the Belles with a 127 single and 355 total, the highest girls' series in the tourney here.

Al Simmons, Indians Coach, Quits Baseball

Ill Health Forces Move After 26 Years

TUCSON, Ariz., April 4 (AP)—Al Simmons tearfully told Cleveland Manager Al Lopez today, "I can't help you any longer," and quit major league baseball for the first time in 26 years.

AL SIMMONS

In his time one of baseball's greatest hitters—he has a lifetime batting average of .334 — Simmons resigned as the Indians' third base coach because of poor health.

"I'm going home to see my doctor in Milwaukee and find out what's wrong with me," said the 47-year-old Simmons who was born Al Szymanski in that town. "I'm finished for this year."

It is believed that Charles (Red) Ruffing, ex-Yankee pitching star and now roving coach for Cleveland, will be appointed to fill the vacancy left by Simmons.

His poor health, friends say, added to a number of personal problems, has depressed him a great deal.

He also has had trouble getting into condition. When he dieted from time to time to take off excess weight, he was left physically weak.

Simmons joined the Indians in 1950 and coached third base under Manager Lou Boudreau. When Lopez replaced Boudreau, general manager Hank Greenberg told him to keep Simmons.

Simmons first left the Athletics in 1933, when Connie Mack broke up his great team. Then he played with Chicago, Washington, Detroit, the Boston Red Sox, Cincinnati, the A's again, and the Boston Braves.

After the Braves, he coached for the Athletics for six seasons before coming to Cleveland.

New York Wins Series

Mounts Whipped St. Francis, Twice Conquerors Of Spas

Mason-Dixon Champs Play Here On Sunday

Cumberland's Spas didn't pick a "pushover" to close their 1950-51 season when they scheduled Mount St. Mary's College of Emmitsburg for Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock on SS. Peter and Paul court.

The Mounts from Frederick County not only won the Mason-Dixon Conference championship this year but they knocked off St. Francis College of Loretto, Pa., which holds two decisions over the Spas.

The Mason-Dixon Conference in which the Mounts copped basketball honors comprises such schools as Catholic U., American U., Western Maryland, Washington Colleges, Delaware U., Johns Hopkins, Towson Teachers, Baltimore Loyola, Bridgewater, Gallaudet, Randolph-Macon and Hampden-Sydney.

Beat Spas Twice

Local cage fans will recall that "Skip" Hughes' St. Francis quint whipped Keegan's club here by scores of 64-55 and 85-72.

St. Francis, regarded as one of the top teams in the tri-state district which included W. & J., Waynesburg, West Virginia and Duquesne, entered the National Catholic Tournament at Albany, N. Y., and was ushered out in a hurry by Mt. St. Mary's to the tune of 83-74. The Mounts won their tourney opener, defeating St. Norbert's of Wisconsin, 91-59, but lost out in the semi-finals to Seattle.

Cosgrove Scoring Ace

Les Cosgrove, Mt. St. Mary's scoring ace, racked up over 30 points a game in his team's two wins in the Albany tourney.

So it looks like the Spas have picked a tartar for a grand finale.

County League Elects Officers

Softball Loop Adopts 35-Game Schedule

Earl Nonnemann was elected president of the County Softball League last night at a meeting at the Corriganville American Legion home and a 35-game schedule for the 1951 season was adopted by the eight-team circuit.

Also named to office for the new season were Dale Broadwater, vice president; Chester DeHaven, treasurer; and Bill Conn, secretary.

One new team was represented at the confab, with seven holdover squads being present. Green's Chevrolet, winner of the Frostburg Softball League title last year, will be a new entry into the loop replacing Narrows Park which has indicated it will not renew its franchise.

Also represented were Corriganville, Ellerslie, Hyndman, Potomac Valley, Stringtown, Wellersburg, and LaVale.

Bill Conn announced last night the next meeting will be held Thursday, April 12, at the Corriganville Legion home at 8 p.m. Fifty dollar forfeit fees will be posted at this meeting, Conn said.

The 35-game schedule adopted by the league will begin April 30 with games every Monday and Thursday. The schedule will end either May 27 or 28, Conn said. A Shaughnessy playoff has also been adopted for the championship.

Mounties Postpone Opening Ball Games

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., April 4 (AP)—West Virginia University announced today the postponement of the first two games of its 1951 baseball season, which had been scheduled here Friday and Saturday against Virginia Tech.

Athletic Director Roy M. Hawley said the two games will be played as a doubleheader on Virginia Tech's home diamond at Blacksburg, Va., May 1.

Two blocked punts converted into scores enabled Allegany High School's Varsity eleven to down the Seniors yesterday at Campobello, 20-0, in the annual Alco spring football game. The contest marked the end of spring drills under Coach Bob Pence.

After a scoreless initial quarter in which the High School squad was twice stopped deep in Senior territory by fumbles peppery George "Brindle" Long blocked a punt and Rick Schramm recovered on the Senior's 14-yard line and Charley Eirich raced around left end for the first touchdown in the second period.

The second blocked kick came in the third stanza when Dick Widdows and Lance Statler got in front of Gene Horton's boot and Ralph Shaffer recovered for the Varsity on the Seniors' 3. Quarterback Ronnie Lease took it over on a sneak through center and Widdows converted.

A 60-yard Senior drive was halted on the Varsity four as the final period got underway and then with Bob Hook and Eugene Horton alternating at carrying the pigskin the winners marched to their final tally. Dick Rank took it over from the one. Widdows converted to complete the scoring.

The Seniors played without the services of three regulars, Ken Birmingham, Bernard Spencer and Bob Anderson who are in the U. S. Marine Corps. Horton and Hook both played in the Senior backfield.

All-State tackle Don Fletcher nd Ronnie Chapman were outstanding for the Seniors while Ronnie Sisk, playing at fullback, bore the brunt of the Varsity attack with able assistance from Eirich and Ray Easton. In the Varsity line, Bernie Beerman, Bill Robeson and Schramm were best. The Lineups:

Fort Hill Girls And Boys Score In Bowling Tourney

Five Teams Vie Here In Handicap Event

Five Cumberland bowling teams participated in the American Junior Bowling Congress' 6th Annual Handicap Tournament the past weekend on the Club Recreation alleys where the Fort Hill boys rolling under the banner of "Hilltoppers" and the Fort Hill girls under the name of "Sentinels" captured top honors in their respective divisions.

Two LaSalle teams known as McIntyre's Grocery and Nave's Market finished in that order in the boys' division. The other girls' team was the Liberty Belles from St. Mary's High.

The tournament is commonly called the "AJBC Telegraphic Tournament" with all AJBC teams bowling in their home towns and sending the scores into Chicago for comparison.

The Hilltoppers carried an enormous handicap of 726 pins but easily defeated the other two entries. The total team score including handicap was 2,948. McIntyre's was second with 2,440 and Nave's Market, third, 2,311. Bill Sites and Bill Hunt topped the Hilltoppers with sets of 478 and 473. Tommy Keech led the Grocers with 463 while Jack Vocke of the Marketeers posted a 198-535 for the highest set in the Cumberland tournament without handicap.

In the girls' division, the Sentinels carried a 780 total handicap but won with 2,234. Jeanne Miller's 334 was high. The Liberty Belles from St. Mary's had a very low handicap of 86 pins per game. Lois Nehring was high for the Belles with a 127 single and 355 total, the highest girls' series in the tourney here.

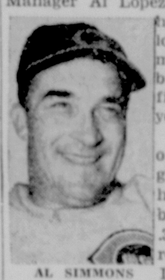
Al Simmons, Indians Coach, Quits Baseball

Ill Health Forces Move After 26 Years

TUCSON, Ariz., April 4 (AP)—Al Simmons tearfully told Cleveland Manager Al Lopez today, "I can't help you any longer," and quit major league baseball for the first time in 26 years.



AL SIMMONS

In his time one of baseball's greatest hitters—he has a lifetime batting average of .334 — Simmons resigned as the Indians' third base coach because of poor health.

"I'm going home to see my doctor in Milwaukee and find out what's wrong with me," said the 47-year-old Simmons who was born Al Szymanski in that town. "I'm finished for this year."

It is believed that Charles (Red) Ruffing, ex-Yankee pitching star and now roving coach for Cleveland, will be appointed to fill the vacancy left by Simmons.

His poor health, friends say, added to a number of personal problems, has depressed him a great deal.

He also has had trouble getting into condition. When he dieted from time to time to take off excess weight, he was left physically weak.

Simmons joined the Indians in 1950 and coached third base under Manager Lou Boudreau. When Lopez replaced Boudreau, general manager Hank Greenberg told him to keep Simmons.

Simmons first left the Athletics in 1933, when Connie Mack broke up his great team. Then he played with Chicago, Washington, Detroit, the Boston Red Sox, Cincinnati, the A's again, and the Boston Braves.

After the Braves, he coached for the Athletics for six seasons before coming to Cleveland.

New York Wins Series

The New York Knickerbockers captured the semi-final series from Syracuse last night by downing the latter five 83 to 81 at New York, winning three games to two.

Mounts Whipped St. Francis, Twice Conquerors Of Spas

Mason-Dixon Champs Play Here On Sunday

Cumberland's Spas didn't pick a "pushover" to close their 1950-51 season when they scheduled Mount St. Mary's College of Emmitsburg for Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock on SS. Peter and Paul court.

The Mounts from Frederick County not only won the Mason-Dixon Conference championship this year but they knocked off St. Francis College of Loretto, Pa., which holds two decisions over the Spas.

The Mason-Dixon Conference in which the Mounts copped basketball honors comprises such schools as Catholic U., American U., Western Maryland, Washington Colleges, Delaware U., Johns Hopkins, Towson Teachers, Baltimore Loyola, Bridgewater, Gallaudet, Randolph-Macon and Hampden-Sydney.

Beat Spas Twice

Local cage fans will recall that "Skip" Hughes' St. Francis quint whipped Keegan's club here by scores of 64-55 and 85-72.

St. Francis, regarded as one of the top teams in the tri-state district which included W. & J., Waynesburg, West Virginia and Duquesne, entered the National Catholic Tournament at Albany, N. Y., and was ushered out in a hurry by Mt. St. Mary's to the tune of 83-74. The Mounts won their tourney opener, defeating St. Norbert's of Wisconsin, 91-59, but lost out in the semi-finals to Seattle.

Cosgrove Scoring Ace

Les Cosgrove, Mt. St. Mary's scoring ace, racked up over 30 points a game in his team's two wins in the Albany tourney.

So it looks like the Spas have picked a tartar for a grand finale.

County League Elects Officers

Softball Loop Adopts 35-Game Schedule

Earl Nonnemann was elected president of the County Softball League last night at a meeting at the Corriganville American Legion home and a 35-game schedule for the 1951 season was adopted by the eight-team circuit.

Also named to office for the new season were Dale Broadwater, vice president; Chester DeHaven, treasurer; and Bill Conn, secretary.

One new team was represented at the confab, with seven holdover squads being present. Green's Chevrolet, winner of the Frostburg Softball League title last year, will be a new entry into the loop replacing Narrows Park which has indicated it will not renew its franchise.

Also represented were Corriganville, Ellerslie, Hyndman, Potomac Valley, Stringtown, Wellersburg, and LaVale.

Bill Conn announced last night the next meeting will be held Thursday, April 12, at the Corriganville Legion home at 8 p.m. Fifty dollar forfeit fees will be posted at this meeting, Conn said.

The 35-game schedule adopted by the league will begin April 30 with games every Monday and Thursday. The schedule will end either May 27 or 28, Conn said. A Shaughnessy playoff has also been adopted for the championship.

Mounties Postpone Opening Ball Games

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., April 4 (AP)—West Virginia University announced today the postponement of the first two games of its 1951 baseball season, which had been scheduled here Friday and Saturday against Virginia Tech.

Athletic Director Roy M. Hawley said the two games will be played as a doubleheader on Virginia Tech's home diamond at Blacksburg, Va., May 1.

Bullock Leads Field

BIRMINGHAM, April 4 (AP) — Fred Bullock, 31 year old Birmingham golfer, led 97 qualifiers in the Dunlop $5,880 golf tournament today with 70-73—143 for 36 of the 90 holes to be played. Bullock was a shot ahead of Tom Haliburton of Scotland.

May Quit Garden

NEW YORK, April 4 (INS)—Dr. Harry N. Wright, president of the College of the City of New York, said today he will recommend that CCNY play no more basketball games in Madison Square Garden.

The basketball program at CCNY — which has seven players and former players implicated in the basketball "fix" scandal—is under scrutiny by the city's board of higher education.

May Quit Garden

NEW YORK, April 4 (INS)—Dr. Harry N. Wright, president of the College of the City of New York, said today he will recommend that CCNY play no more basketball games in Madison Square Garden.

The basketball program at CCNY — which has seven players and former players implicated in the basketball "fix" scandal—is under scrutiny by the city's board of higher education.

May Quit Garden

NEW YORK, April 4 (INS)—Dr. Harry N. Wright, president of the College of the City of New York, said today he will recommend that CCNY play no more basketball games in Madison Square Garden.

The basketball program at CCNY — which has seven players and former players implicated in the basketball "fix" scandal—is under scrutiny by the city's board of higher education.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, April 4 (INS)—Richard Widmark is one of the most modest actors I've ever met.

Ann Sheridan

He has never become too big for his boots and has always cooperated with his studio.

That's why Darryl Zanuck sees to it that Richard gets good roles (of course, his being a good actor doesn't hurt either) —. Darryl has just purchased "Island In The Wilderness," a novel by Ernest K. Gann, for Widmark and turned it over to Frank Rosenberg to produce.

The story is that of a plane that overshoots the airport at Gander, Newfoundland, and has a forced landing in the Canadian wilderness. Anyone who has ever flown the Atlantic has pangs of fear that just such a thing could happen. At any rate, it tells the story of what happens to the passengers in an isolated spot. Work starts this summer in a Canadian location.

• — • — •

Ann Sheridan told me about the luncheon she had with Billy Wilder after I asked her if she was going to be in Maurice Chevalier's picture, "A New Kind Of Love."

"I have owned a comedy, 'It Must Be Love,' for two years," Ann told me, "and I have been planning to make it myself. I'd like nothing better than to work with Billy Wilder, so we met to discuss my comedy. He said, 'How would you like to be in Chevalier's picture, "A New Kind Of Love"?'

"I was sure he was kidding, so I answered, 'Well, if it's a girl's part I accept'."

Billy has not gone to Paris as everyone thought, he is still in town. Chevalier will come here to make the picture on the Paramount lot.

Gene Fowler has at last finished his biography of Jimmy Durante. Viking will publish it this fall under the title of "Schnozzola."

Gene figures he has invested approximately $40,000 in this book so far for research, for trips back east to gather material and other expenses.

It was interesting when Gene said that he had established a new method of writing this book by dictating about 3,000,000 words on a tape recorder and out of this mass of material eventually cutting it down to 150,000 words. Gene, if I've got the figures wrong correct me. You know how I am about figures. Anyway, this is a book all will want to read.

• — • — •

I can tell Rita Hayworth right now that Harry Cohn never said that she would have to do "Lona Hanson," the western she turned down a few years ago, if she came back. He never said she had to do anything.

It was the "Lona Hanson" story that brought about Rita's suspension. While I hate to side against my friend, Harry, I think Rita was right in not wanting to do this particular picture—or at least the book—what Columbia did with the script, I don't know.

Rita is so happy to be in her own country that I still can't believe what she said in her radiogram to me about having no plans to come to Hollywood. I think she could be persuaded.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

To soft, slow Viennese waltzes, Merle Oberon and Dr. Rex Ross danced every dance at the Macayo Sunday night. I repeat, this is the most serious romance Merle has had since Count Georges Cini.

"From Here To Eternity" will be without all its profanity and some of the troubles of the enlisted men when it reaches the screen. That's the outline S. Sylvan Simon gave the Department of Defense in Washington.

The Hollywood lodge branch of the Sons of Italy in America, headed by Michele G. Monteleon, has invited Lou Costello to be master of ceremonies at their dinner-dance June 9, and later entertain with Bud Abbott. What a great reception Bud and Lou got at the opening of "The Invisible Man," and what a good picture it is.

Hedy Lamarr is writing an article for a national magazine titled "The Curse Of Beauty." Well, she ought to know.

Judy Holliday appears on the radio show Bob Hope does at the Great Lakes Naval Training School April 10.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Should you be ashamed of your dreams?

Answer: Certainly not—all the less because you cannot control them. The most "shocking" wishes or ideas that find an outlet in dreams are so well disguised that you don't recognize them, but most people still have dreams—say, of the death of someone they love—which may frighten or disturb them. Actually, dreams are nature's "drainage system," through which we gratify and eliminate the surviving primitive impulses which would be dangerous if they had no other outlet. For this reason, dreaming is as necessary to your mental health as breathing or eating to your body.

Will being frustrated kill your child's love?

Answer: It may make him hate you for the moment, but that doesn't mean that he will cease to love you underneath—his need of you makes this inevitable. Especially with a small child, you should always try to say, not "No," but "No, but—" You should avoid frustrating him completely by turning his interest toward something else. As a child grows older, however, he begins to realize that you "know what is best for him," and will resent your failure to protect him from his own possible blunders more than he will your denying him something he wants.

Does a good teacher "know all the answers"?

Answer: At least if he does, he does not give them to his pupils. The object of education should not be primarily to fill a student's mind with knowledge. It should rather be to help him realize the extent of his ignorance and to train him in the art of "digging out" the information he needs when he needs it. You cannot really teach another person anything—you can only show him how to learn it. Just how much a teacher knows is unimportant compared with how well he can communicate an interest in learning.

Work starts this summer in a Canadian location.

Ann Sheridan told me about the luncheon she had with Billy Wilder after I asked her if she was going to be in Maurice Chevalier's picture, "A New Kind Of Love."

"I have owned a comedy, 'It Must Be Love,' for two years," Ann told me, "and I have been planning to make it myself. I'd like nothing better than to work with Billy Wilder, so we met to discuss my comedy. He said, 'How would you like to be in Chevalier's picture, "A New Kind Of Love"?'

"I was sure he was kidding, so I answered, 'Well, if it's a girl's part I accept'."

Billy has not gone to Paris as everyone thought, he is still in town. Chevalier will come here to make the picture on the Paramount lot.

Gene figures he has invested approximately $40,000 in this book so far for research, for trips back east to gather material and other expenses.

It was interesting when Gene said that he had established a new method of writing this book by dictating about 3,000,000 words on a tape recorder and out of this mass of material eventually cutting it down to 150,000 words. Gene, if I've got the figures wrong correct me. You know how I am about figures. Anyway, this is a book all will want to read.

I can tell Rita Hayworth right now that Harry Cohn never said that she would have to do "Lona Hanson," the western she turned down a few years ago, if she came back. He never said she had to do anything.

It was the "Lona Hanson" story that brought about Rita's suspension. While I hate to side against my friend, Harry, I think Rita was right in not wanting to do this particular picture—or at least the book—what Columbia did with the script, I don't know.

Rita is so happy to be in her own country that I still can't believe what she said in her radiogram to me about having no plans to come to Hollywood. I think she could be persuaded.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

To soft, slow Viennese waltzes, Merle Oberon and Dr. Rex Ross danced every dance at the Macayo Sunday night. I repeat, this is the most serious romance Merle has had since Count Georges Cini.

"From Here To Eternity" will be without all its profanity and some of the troubles of the enlisted men when it reaches the screen. That's the outline S. Sylvan Simon gave the Department of Defense in Washington.

This is real tragedy. H. Alexander McDonald, business associate of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s., has three of his family suffering with polio—his wife, his young daughter and his eleven-day-old baby son. Certainly there should be no delay in plans for the polio hospital here.

The Hollywood lodge branch of the Sons of Italy in America, headed by Michele G. Monteleon, has invited Lou Costello to be master of ceremonies at their dinner-dance June 9, and later entertain with Bud Abbott. What a great reception Bud and Lou got at the opening of "The Invisible Man," and what a good picture it is.

Hedy Lamarr is writing an article for a national magazine titled "The Curse Of Beauty." Well, she ought to know.

A twosome at Jack's at the Beach was Linda Darnell and Bob Calhoun.

Judy Holliday appears on the radio show Bob Hope does at the Great Lakes Naval Training School April 10.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Should you be ashamed of your dreams?

Answer: Certainly not—all the less because you cannot control them. The most "shocking" wishes or ideas that find an outlet in dreams are so well disguised that you don't recognize them, but most people still have dreams—say, of the death of someone they love—which may frighten or disturb them. Actually, dreams are nature's "drainage system," through which we gratify and eliminate the surviving primitive impulses which would be dangerous if they had no other outlet. For this reason, dreaming is as necessary to your mental health as breathing or eating to your body.

Will being frustrated kill your child's love?

Answer: It may make him hate you for the moment, but that doesn't mean that he will cease to love you underneath—his need of you makes this inevitable. Especially with a small child, you should always try to say, not "No," but "No, but—" You should avoid frustrating him completely by turning his interest toward something else. As a child grows older, however, he begins to realize that you "know what is best for him," and will resent your failure to protect him from his own possible blunders more than he will your denying him something he wants.

Does a good teacher "know all the answers"?

Answer: At least if he does, he does not give them to his pupils. The object of education should not be primarily to fill a student's mind with knowledge. It should rather be to help him realize the extent of his ignorance and to train him in the art of "digging out" the information he needs when he needs it. You cannot really teach another person anything—you can only show him how to learn it. Just how much a teacher knows is unimportant compared with how well he can communicate an interest in learning.

I can tell Rita Hayworth right now that Harry Cohn never said that she would have to do "Lona Hanson," the western she turned down a few years ago, if she came back. He never said she had to do anything.

It was the "Lona Hanson" story that brought about Rita's suspension. While I hate to side against my friend, Harry, I think Rita was right in not wanting to do this particular picture—or at least the book—what Columbia did with the script, I don't know.

Rita is so happy to be in her own country that I still can't believe what she said in her radiogram to me about having no plans to come to Hollywood. I think she could be persuaded.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

To soft, slow Viennese waltzes, Merle Oberon and Dr. Rex Ross danced every dance at the Macayo Sunday night. I repeat, this is the most serious romance Merle has had since Count Georges Cini.

"From Here To Eternity" will be without all its profanity and some of the troubles of the enlisted men when it reaches the screen. That's the outline S. Sylvan Simon gave the Department of Defense in Washington.

This is real tragedy. H. Alexander McDonald, business associate of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s., has three of his family suffering with polio—his wife, his young daughter and his eleven-day-old baby son. Certainly there should be no delay in plans for the polio hospital here.

The Hollywood lodge branch of the Sons of Italy in America, headed by Michele G. Monteleon, has invited Lou Costello to be master of ceremonies at their dinner-dance June 9, and later entertain with Bud Abbott. What a great reception Bud and Lou got at the opening of "The Invisible Man," and what a good picture it is.

Hedy Lamarr is writing an article for a national magazine titled "The Curse Of Beauty." Well, she ought to know.

A twosome at Jack's at the Beach was Linda Darnell and Bob Calhoun.

Judy Holliday appears on the radio show Bob Hope does at the Great Lakes Naval Training School April 10.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Should you be ashamed of your dreams?

Answer: Certainly not—all the less because you cannot control them. The most "shocking" wishes or ideas that find an outlet in dreams are so well disguised that you don't recognize them, but most people still have dreams—say, of the death of someone they love—which may frighten or disturb them. Actually, dreams are nature's "drainage system," through which we gratify and eliminate the surviving primitive impulses which would be dangerous if they had no other outlet. For this reason, dreaming is as necessary to your mental health as breathing or eating to your body.

Will being frustrated kill your child's love?

Answer: It may make him hate you for the moment, but that doesn't mean that he will cease to love you underneath—his need of you makes this inevitable. Especially with a small child, you should always try to say, not "No," but "No, but—" You should avoid frustrating him completely by turning his interest toward something else. As a child grows older, however, he begins to realize that you "know what is best for him," and will resent your failure to protect him from his own possible blunders more than he will your denying him something he wants.

Does a good teacher "know all the answers"?

Answer: At least if he does, he does not give them to his pupils. The object of education should not be primarily to fill a student's mind with knowledge. It should rather be to help him realize the extent of his ignorance and to train him in the art of "digging out" the information he needs when he needs it. You cannot really teach another person anything—you can only show him how to learn it. Just how much a teacher knows is unimportant compared with how well he can communicate an interest in learning.

Tie With a Message

His Tie's a Caution

FASHION: Comedian Peter Donald (right) wears the smart round-collar-with-pin and the new Safe-T-Tie which features road traffic signals. The tie is enjoying a boom among executives of safety organizations, municipalities and plants who like a message with their fashions.

Dress Tips: When donning your hat, hold brim front and back with fingers close to crown. Saves the shape. . . . Look over your stored-away summer sport shirts now. No matter how carefully you have packed them, they probably need a pressing.

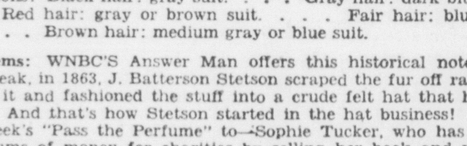
About Ties: You currently can choose from 100,000 color combinations and 40,000 different patterns. . . . 3.7 ties per year are bought for each adult male. . . . Of the 191,000,000 ties sold in '50, 91 per cent were four-in-hands, 8 per cent bows and 1 per cent miscellaneous.

Sport Shirt Collars: Did you ever have a favorite sport shirt and want another like it—but didn't know what to ask for? The four styles illustrated below are as follows: 1. Regular collar; 2. Crew neck; 3. Gaucho collar; 4. Cat Cay collar.



Auto Hints: You may not always have an old pair of gloves around to keep your hands clean when changing a tire. You've got plenty of old socks, though, haven't you? Next time you're discarding a pair, put them in the glove compartment instead. For dirty work, they're as good as gloves.

Your Coloring: Most men can wear any color, but you'll find some colors more becoming to you than others. Here's a fast rundown of suggestions: Black hair: gray suit. . . . Gray hair: dark blue suit. . . . Red hair: gray or brown suit. . . . Fair hair: blue-gray suit. . . . Brown hair: medium gray or blue suit.

Odd Items: WNBC'S Answer Man offers this historical note: On Pike's Peak, in 1863, J. Batterson Stetson scraped the fur off rawhide, chewed it and fashioned the stuff into a crude felt hat that he sold for $5. And that's how Stetson started in the hat business! . . . This week's "Pass the Perfume" to—Sophie Tucker, who has raised great sums of money for charities by selling her book and records wherever she works.

His Tie's a Caution

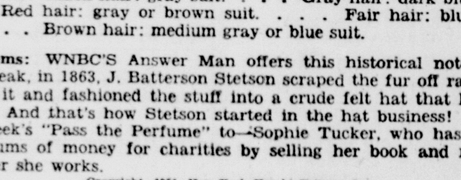
FASHION: Comedian Peter Donald (right) wears the smart round-collar-with-pin and the new Safe-T-Tie which features road traffic signals. The tie is enjoying a boom among executives of safety organizations, municipalities and plants who like a message with their fashions.

Dress Tips: When donning your hat, hold brim front and back with fingers close to crown. Saves the shape. . . . Look over your stored-away summer sport shirts now. No matter how carefully you have packed them, they probably need a pressing.

Gadgets: A multi-purpose pocket scissors that combines a screw driver, hammer, wire cutter, ruler, penknife, file, cigar cutter, vise and glass cutter.

About Ties: You currently can choose from 100,000 color combinations and 40,000 different patterns. . . . 3.7 ties per year are bought for each adult male. . . . Of the 191,000,000 ties sold in '50, 91 per cent were four-in-hands, 8 per cent bows and 1 per cent miscellaneous.

Sport Shirt Collars: Did you ever have a favorite sport shirt and want another like it—but didn't know what to ask for? The four styles illustrated below are as follows: 1. Regular collar; 2. Crew neck; 3. Gaucho collar; 4. Cat Cay collar.



Auto Hints: You may not always have an old pair of gloves around to keep your hands clean when changing a tire. You've got plenty of old socks, though, haven't you? Next time you're discarding a pair, put them in the glove compartment instead. For dirty work, they're as good as gloves.

Your Coloring: Most men can wear any color, but you'll find some colors more becoming to you than others. Here's a fast rundown of suggestions: Black hair: gray suit. . . . Gray hair: dark blue suit. . . . Red hair: gray or brown suit. . . . Fair hair: blue-gray suit. . . . Brown hair: medium gray or blue suit.

Odd Items: WNBC'S Answer Man offers this historical note: On Pike's Peak, in 1863, J. Batterson Stetson scraped the fur off rawhide, chewed it and fashioned the stuff into a crude felt hat that he sold for $5. And that's how Stetson started in the hat business! . . . This week's "Pass the Perfume" to—Sophie Tucker, who has raised great sums of money for charities by selling her book and records wherever she works.

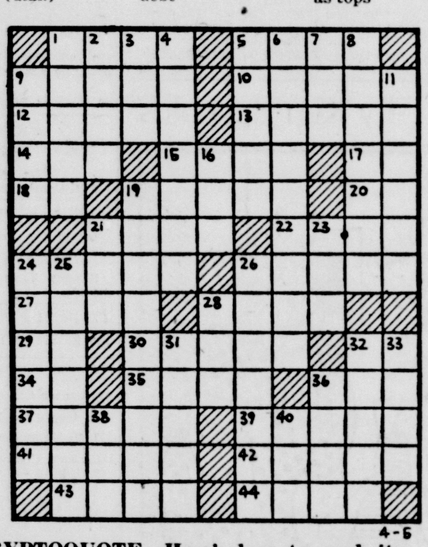
Yesterday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

'P O C U O Q J F P Q J U J C U O J B J B Z C B-
X F W O X P Q Q Z V V Z O I V C U P U Z L O X F G
— W C M.

Tie With a Message

His Tie's a Caution

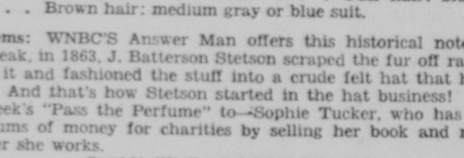
FASHION: Comedian Peter Donald (right) wears the smart round-collar-with-pin and the new Safe-T-Tie which features road traffic signals. The tie is enjoying a boom among executives of safety organizations, municipalities and plants who like a message with their fashions.

Dress Tips: When donning your hat, hold brim front and back with fingers close to crown. Saves the shape. . . . Look over your stored-away summer sport shirts now. No matter how carefully you have packed them, they probably need a pressing.

Gadgets: A multi-purpose pocket scissors that combines a screw driver, hammer, wire cutter, ruler, penknife, file, cigar cutter, vise and glass cutter.

About Ties: You currently can choose from 100,000 color combinations and 40,000 different patterns. . . . 3.7 ties per year are bought for each adult male. . . . Of the 191,000,000 ties sold in '50, 91 per cent were four-in-hands, 8 per cent bows and 1 per cent miscellaneous.

Sport Shirt Collars: Did you ever have a favorite sport shirt and want another like it—but didn't know what to ask for? The four styles illustrated below are as follows: 1. Regular collar; 2. Crew neck; 3. Gaucho collar; 4. Cat Cay collar.



Auto Hints: You may not always have an old pair of gloves around to keep your hands clean when changing a tire. You've got plenty of old socks, though, haven't you? Next time you're discarding a pair, put them in the glove compartment instead. For dirty work, they're as good as gloves.

Your Coloring: Most men can wear any color, but you'll find some colors more becoming to you than others. Here's a fast rundown of suggestions: Black hair: gray suit. . . . Gray hair: dark blue suit. . . . Red hair: gray or brown suit. . . . Fair hair: blue-gray suit. . . . Brown hair: medium gray or blue suit.

Odd Items: WNBC'S Answer Man offers this historical note: On Pike's Peak, in 1863, J. Batterson Stetson scraped the fur off rawhide, chewed it and fashioned the stuff into a crude felt hat that he sold for $5. And that's how Stetson started in the hat business! . . . This week's "Pass the Perfume" to—Sophie Tucker, who has raised great sums of money for charities by selling her book and records wherever she works.

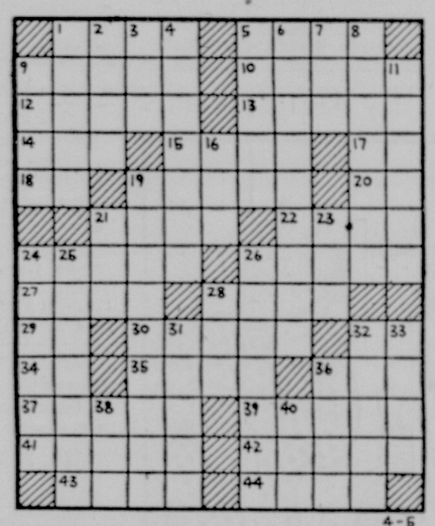
Yesterday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

'P O C U O Q J F P Q J U J C U O J B J B Z C B-
X F W O X P Q Q Z V V Z O I V C U P U Z L O X F G
— W C M.

Yesterday's Cryptoquote: EACH ORNAMENT ABOUT HER SEEMLY LIES, BY CURIOUS CHANCE, OR CARELESS ART COMPOSED—FAIRFAX.

Market Rises Due To Late Rush To Buy Rail Issues

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP) — A final spurt in the buying of railroad issues today brought on a general advance in the stock market.

The market did very little until the latter part of the final hour when there was a buying rush that swept prices up by as much as $2 a share.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 80 cents to $92.60 with the industrial component of the average advancing 80 cents, rails $1.00 and utilities 20 cents.

B. & O today reported freight traffic in March was the heaviest since last August and close to a peak for four years.

Market Rises Due To Late Rush To Buy Rail Issues

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP) — A final spurt in the buying of railroad issues today brought on a general advance in the stock market.

The market did very little until the latter part of the final hour when there was a buying rush that swept prices up by as much as $2 a share.

Market Rises Due To Late Rush To Buy Rail Issues

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP) — A final spurt in the buying of railroad issues today brought on a general advance in the stock market.

The market did very little until the latter part of the final hour when there was a buying rush that swept prices up by as much as $2 a share.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 80 cents to $92.60 with the industrial component of the average advancing 80 cents, rails $1.00 and utilities 20 cents.

To further show the off-setting nature of market action today and yesterday, trading amounted to 1,290,000 shares today and 1,220,000 shares yesterday.

New Recovery Plant At Luke Mill Improves Firm's Operation

Facility Begins Action This Week

Changes of major economic importance to this area went into effect at the Luke mill of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company this week.

A new recovery plant, housed in an eight-story steel and tile building at the west end of the mill yard, began operations, enabling the mill to switch over from an old soda process to the modern sulphate method of making pulp.

To Aid Community

This change means that the mill, which is the main economic support of the community, can now take better advantage of the supply of hardwoods available in this region and begin to fortify its position in the highly competitive field of publication papers.

The key to the change-over is a large new smelter unit, especially designed to recover the chemicals used to cook wood chips by the sulphate method. This installation, which took over a year to build, includes a 250-ton recovery furnace, capable of handling more than 600,000 gallons of spent liquor daily, combined with a boiler unit which will produce about 100,000 pounds of high pressure steam per hour.

In reviewing the background of the change, plant officials explained that the kinds of paper made at any integrated pulp and paper mill depend largely on the kinds of wood within economic reach. Strong papers for packaging and similar uses are made most frequently where ample stands of pine and other conifers grow nearby. Where the forest is mostly hardwood, as at Luke, pulp more readily goes into papers for magazines and other printing purposes. With the soda process, which it helped pioneer, the Luke mill for years held a top position in this field. The advent of the sulphate method, however, made it difficult to keep up with newer mills producing stronger and relatively better hardwood pulp, at lower costs.

Major Problems

There were a number of major technical and economic problems to be overcome, plant officials explained, before the new process could be introduced at Luke. Most of these have now been solved, or at least reduced to manageable proportions, and with the new pulp lay-out and other improvements completed or planned, the company expects the competitive position of the Luke mill to improve steadily. The mill, it was pointed out, enjoys an excellent location with respect to wood supply and transportation to the market.

In the first step of the new recovery process, spent liquor from the digesters, where the wood is cooked, is boiled under vacuum in a battery of multiple effect evaporators, reducing it to the consistency of molasses. This soup then is piped to the recovery unit where a cascade evaporator, using heat provided by waste gases from the boiler, concentrates it further. To this concentration is added the chemical fines collected by the precipitator, plus salt cake, to change the chemicals back into their original form and thus complete the recovery cycle.

New Digester

The big smelter replaces seven costly rotary incinerators and 13 leachers used in the past to recover spent liquor from the soda process. The rest of the pulp manufacturing layout at the Luke mill remains about the same as in the past, except that one new digester of 3,520 cubic-foot capacity has been added to supplement the five digesters formerly in operation. The sixth digester may ultimately allow the plant to increase its pulp production from 170 to about 200 tons per day, bringing the plant's paper and pulp production in closer balance.

Plant officials also explained that the new recovery unit should result in considerable improvement in the condition of the Potomac River, from which the plant draws its water supply and into which it returns waste water. It was pointed out that the capacity of the old recovery line was not sufficient to handle all the liquor required for the 170 tons of pulp produced daily at the mill, with the result that some of the weaker wastes escaped into the river. The new smelter not only is more efficient than the old equipment, recovering nearly all the spent liquor for re-use, but is

Sewer Project In Mapleside Is Progressing

Mrs. Roeder Says Bedford Road Next

Work on a sewage construction project in the Mapleside Section is progressing on schedule and similar construction on Bedford Road is slated this year, Mrs. Lucile Roeder, commissioner of Streets and Public Property, anounced last night.

The extensive Mapleside program, which began February 16, was planned to correct what was considered the most serious sewage problem within the city.

The line began at the intersection of Oldtown Road and an unnamed lane at Brookland Addition, extended two blocks north on the lane, on Kentucky Avenue from the lane to Laing's Lane and on Michigan Avenue from the lane to Massachusetts Avenue, where it will tie in with an old sewer.

Will Cost $8,281

The 1,926 foot sewage line will include 630 feet of 10 inch line leading from Oldtown Road, 600 feet of eight inch line on Kentucky Avenue and another 696 feet of sewer line on Michigan Avenue.

Six manholes are included in the project which is estimated to cost $8,281.78. The work is being financed from the Sewage Bond Fund.

Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, said yesterday that the line is now at Massachusetts Avenue and Laing Lane.

The work, Corrigan said, has been progressing splendidly in recent weeks and estimated that several good weeks will see the work completed.

Other Project Slated

Slated for construction this year is a similar sewer on Bedford Road to eliminate a serious health hazard in that area, Mrs. Roeder said.

Work on the Mapleside project has been facilitated by the use of the shovel the city purchase last year.

Mrs. Roeder said workers report the equipment has been working "like a charm" in spite of the wet condition of the ground in that area.

Work has been relayed on several occasions as workers had to resort to dynamite to blast rock formations found along the route.

Jobs, Payrolls Show Increase In This Area

Building Permits Rise In March

Employment and payrolls show an increase in the Cumberland area during the month of February over the same period of last year.

In the monthly report of activities of the Chamber of Commerce, 13,102 were employed in the 17 industries of Cumberland. During February 1950, 11,822 were employed. $3,161,473.49 was realized in payrolls for the same industries, an increase of $433,443.32 over last years figure.

A decrease in Postal receipts was noted during February over January 1951. In January $35,768.95 was spent while in February $30,036.76 was realized.

U. S. Savings Bonds showed an increase to the amount of $2,812.50. In January $6,337.50 was spent while in February $9,150.00 worth of bonds were bought.

There was a decrease of $3,753.00 in postal savings deposits during February of this year. During January $363,522.00 was realized. There was no change in savings stamps receipts during February.

Building permits showed an increase of $7,390.00 in March over February. Last month $104,150.00 was spent for permits.

A decrease in registrations for employment and an increase in placements was seen during last month. There were 110 less registered and 27 more placed in jobs during the first half of March than during February.

Cumberland showed a 25 percent increase during January in debits to individual accounts as compared to figures of January 1950. In the Fifth Federal Reserve District retail sales in furniture stores showed an increase of 22 percent, department stores an increase of 28 percent and a 22 percent increase was noted in stocks during January over the same month last year.

Fast Time Will Begin April 29

Referendum Slated In Coming Elections

Daylight Savings Time in Cumberland will begin this year at 2 a. m. Sunday, April 29, and will be in effect until 2 a. m. Sunday, September 30.

The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, in making the announcement, pointed out that Daylight Savings Time, under a Senate bill passed by the Legislature, will be subject to referendum at the next city election.

A county-wide vote will be held on the DST question in the autumn of 1952 as the result of a House bill introduced by Delegate Horace P. Whitworth, Jr.

The Board of Allegany County Commissioners has not yet taken action on fast time for this year, but traditionally has concurred with the action of the Mayor and Council of Cumberland.

Conduit Work Begins Today

Expect Completion In September

Work began this morning on the Frederick Street pressure conduit in conjunction with the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control project now underway in the city.

Albert S. Paye, liasion engineer for the project said last night that the steel sheet piling work will begin today. The excavation will be approximately seven feet below the existing bed of Wills Creek.

Yesterday the pavement was broken and today construction will begin at the creek, come up Bedford Street to Mechanic and along the west side of Mechanic Street to Frederick. Work is expected to be completed on this phase sometime in September.

Officials of the project met yesterday with Acting Fire Chief J. V. Defibaugh and Police Chief Emmett Flynn and completed plans for rerouting traffic. Paye said last night that Mechanic Street traffic will be diverted up Bedford Street to City Hall Plaza and back down Frederick Street to Mechanic or out Liberty Street. Auxiliary police will be on duty to direct traffic.

An easement has been located at the Holland Service Station, corner of Mechanic and Bedford Streets. George and Lynch are contractors for the project with Thomas Earl and Sons, Philadelphia as subcontractors.

Perfect Record Is Shattered

For the first time in 15 years the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce Report of Activities was late getting in the mail.

Area Army Reserves To Know Classifications By New Plan

Members of the area U. S. Army Reserve Corps will know by June 1 where they stand with the army under present plans to give each reservist a complete physical examination during the next two months.

The project is under the general direction of Col. which will result in classification of every reservist so that he will know what his status with the Army is at all times and so that the Army can have available a comprehensive list of all men available for service.

Grand Jury Recommends Repairs To County Property

Group Returns 11 Indictments

The April grand jury of Allegany County Circuit completed three days of deliberation yesterday afternoon by submitting a seven-page report which recommended certain repairs and improvements to county-owned property, but, in general, commended county officials for the conduct of their duties.

After Associate Judge Mogran C. Harris received the report he addressed them briefly on the importance of the jury system in the United States. He then informed the 25 grand jurors that they were not being discharged, but merely excused. Although he expressed doubt that they would be recalled, he said the April grand jury would not be discharged until October.

Fletcher's Duty

Judge Harris told the grand jury that it was the duty of State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher to refer the grand jury recommendations to the proper county authorities for appropriate action.

The grand jury report endorsed the proposed four-year program of the Allegany County Board of Commissioners which calls for expenditures of approximately $172,237 for repairs and maintenance and $120,200 for new construction and remodeling of county-owned property.

In its report the grand jury noted that 11 indictments were returned as a result of its deliberations.

Court House Needs

The need for repairs at the County Court House was given considerable emphasis. It was contended that the entrance to the Court House should be kept neat and clean so that citizens coming to the building would be favorably impressed upon entering the edifice.

Paint for the howitzer on the Court House lawn and new flooring in the county agent's office on the third floor also were recommended.

The report was signed by Porter D. Collins, foreman, and George Schwarzenbach and James M. Carter, clerks.

The full report follows: —

FIRST—We have been in session three days, have examined 35 witnesses and have returned 11 indictments.

SECOND—The Grand Jury, in its report for January, 1951, made numerous recommendations to the Board of County Commissioners for repairs and improvements to the County institutions — including the Allegany County Home, Sylvan Retreat, the Allegany County Infirmary, the Allegany County Jail, and the Court House. The recommendations made in this previous report were extensive and complete. In fact, grand juries prior to January, 1951, had made similar recommendations; although in not such detail.

The Allegany County Commissioners appeared before the present Grand Jury and submitted a long-range program for repairs and capital improvements to the Court House, Allegany County Jail, Union Street Building, Allegany County Garage, Allegany County Infirmary, Sylvan Retreat, Allegany County Home, and the Cumberland Street Building now occupied by the Welfare Board. Included in this program was the installation of a new central laundry, at the cost of $60,000.00, to serve Sylvan Retreat, the County Home and County Infirmary. This program is set up to be carried out over a period of four years, beginning in 1951 and ending in 1954. It includes a total cost estimated at $172,237.00 for repairs and maintenance over this period of time, and $120,200.00 for new construction and capital improvements to the buildings and equipment heretofore listed. The total amount to be expended on this four-year program is $292,437.00, of which amount $56,305.00 will be spent in 1951; $70,725.00 in 1952; $18,770.00 in 1953; and $26,437.00 in 1954 for maintenance and repairs.

In the reports hereinafter set forth by the committees from your Grand Jury that have inspected the various institutions, practically all of the suggested repairs or improvements, which might have been suggested, have been provided for in the four-year program submitted by the County Commissioners and it will be unnecessary to go into detail in these reports as has been done by past grand juries.

It is the opinion of your Grand

TWUA Spurns Wage Boost With Strings

To Follow Through With Present Pact

Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), will follow through with its present contract until its expiration date if the Celanese Corporation does not feel morally obligated to grant a cost of living increase, Playford Aldridge, president of the local, announced last night.

The first request for the wage boost, the union said, was made January 17 in a letter from Herbert W. Payne, TWUA rayon director, to H. C. Givens, Jr., Amcelle plant manager, proposing a supplemental agreement based on the Bureau of Labor price index.

Suggests 3.7 Boost

Payne suggested that under a WSB ruling, the local could be granted a 3.7 cent increase.

On January 26, the union said, the company pointed out the agreement was but five months old and that it was under no obligation to adjust wages. The letter added the company did not favor an arrangement based on an automatic adjustment of wages but said it would meet to discuss the matter on the understanding that its rights under the agreement would not be affected.

At the first joint meeting March 15, Payne made the union request verbally, Aldridge said. He said the company denied consideration of an escalator clause.

Cites Other Boosts

Aldridge said the union's position was that the company is morally obligated to grant the cost of living increase.

The Amcelle request, he said, was made only after American Viscose and Industrial Rayon granted voluntary three cent boosts to their employes.

Payne, at the time, cited a three cent boost at the Celco plant last September, followed by a 11½ cent increase in February, 1951, for a total of 14½ cents, resulting in the company meeting the WSB 10 per cent formula at that plant, Aldridge said.

Union officials said the company, at the second meeting March 15, formally rejected the escalator clause and asked what the union was willing to give in exchange for the proposed increase.

Will Follow Through

During the discussion, the union said, the company proposed extending the present pact for one year from March 15, with a clause providing reopening of the pact once for wages, but qualifying that if no agreement were reached, the union would have no recourse.

The union said its negotiating committee, with membership sanction, declined the offer because of the strings attached, since the Viscose and Rayon firms made no conditions in their offers.

Aldridge said the union position is that if the company does not feel morally obligated to grant cost of living boosts to its employes, the local will follow through with its contract until the expiration date August 8, 1951.

Coroner's Jury Acquits Rutter

Local Man's Death Termed Justifiable

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide yesterday at Uniontown, Pa., in the fatal shooting of William R. Durbin, Cumberland, by a Connellsville, Pa., resident.

According to an Associated Press dispatch, Donald C. Rutter was cleared of the charge. Rutter stated that he shot Durbin as a prowler who was attempting to climb into his second story bedroom.

The shooting occured on Saturday, March 24. Durbin was a Western Maryland Railroad brakeman and member of a train crew, which was spending the night at Dickerson Run, Pa. He was killed instantly when a German Luger bullet penetrated his heart.

County Detective Frank Kane, who answered a summons by Rutter, went to the scene of the shooting. Rutter said he fired two shots at the person on the porch outside his window, but wasn't sure whether the man had jumped or fallen from the porch roof.

Durbin was a veteran of World War II and a member of William McKaig Lodge 440, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. His home was on Fairmont Avenue here.

New Recovery Plant At Luke Mill Improves Firm's Operation

Facility Begins Action This Week

Changes of major economic importance to this area went into effect at the Luke mill of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company this week.

A new recovery plant, housed in an eight-story steel and tile building at the west end of the mill yard, began operations, enabling the mill to switch over from an old soda process to the modern sulphate method of making pulp.

To Aid Community

This change means that the mill, which is the main economic support of the community, can now take better advantage of the supply of hardwoods available in this region and begin to fortify its position in the highly competitive field of publication papers.

The key to the change-over is a large new smelter unit, especially designed to recover the chemicals used to cook wood chips by the sulphate method. This installation, which took over a year to build, includes a 250-ton recovery furnace, capable of handling more than 600,000 gallons of spent liquor daily, combined with a boiler unit which will produce about 100,000 pounds of high pressure steam per hour.

In reviewing the background of the change, plant officials explained that the kinds of paper made at any integrated pulp and paper mill depend largely on the kinds of wood within economic reach. Strong papers for packaging and similar uses are made most frequently where ample stands of pine and other conifers grow nearby. Where the forest is mostly hardwood, as at Luke, pulp more readily goes into papers for magazines and other printing purposes. With the soda process, which it helped pioneer, the Luke mill for years held a top position in this field. The advent of the sulphate method, however, made it difficult to keep up with newer mills producing stronger and relatively better hardwood pulp, at lower costs.

Major Problems

There were a number of major technical and economic problems to be overcome, plant officials explained, before the new process could be introduced at Luke. Most of these have now been solved, or at least reduced to manageable proportions, and with the new pulp lay-out and other improvements completed or planned, the company expects the competitive position of the Luke mill to improve steadily. The mill, it was pointed out, enjoys an excellent location with respect to wood supply and transportation to the market.

In the first step of the new recovery process, spent liquor from the digesters, where the wood is cooked, is boiled under vacuum in a battery of multiple effect evaporators, reducing it to the consistency of molasses. This soup then is piped to the recovery unit where a cascade evaporator, using heat provided by waste gases from the boiler, concentrates it further. To this concentration is added the chemical fines collected by the precipitator, plus salt cake, to change the chemicals back into their original form and thus complete the recovery cycle.

New Digester

The big smelter replaces seven costly rotary incinerators and 13 leachers used in the past to recover spent liquor from the soda process. The rest of the pulp manufacturing layout at the Luke mill remains about the same as in the past, except that one new digester of 3,520 cubic-foot capacity has been added to supplement the five digesters formerly in operation. The sixth digester may ultimately allow the plant to increase its pulp production from 170 to about 200 tons per day, bringing the plant's paper and pulp production in closer balance.

Plant officials also explained that the new recovery unit should result in considerable improvement in the condition of the Potomac River, from which the plant draws its water supply and into which it returns waste water. It was pointed out that the capacity of the old recovery line was not sufficient to handle all the liquor required for the 170 tons of pulp produced daily at the mill, with the result that some of the weaker wastes escaped into the river. The new smelter not only is more efficient than the old equipment, recovering nearly all the spent liquor for re-use, but is

Mrs. Roeder Says Bedford Road Next

Work on a sewage construction project in the Mapleside Section is progressing on schedule and similar construction on Bedford Road is slated this year, Mrs. Lucile Roeder, commissioner of Streets and Public Property, anounced last night.

The extensive Mapleside program, which began February 16, was planned to correct what was considered the most serious sewage problem within the city.

The line began at the intersection of Oldtown Road and an unnamed lane at Brookland Addition, extended two blocks north on the lane, on Kentucky Avenue from the lane to Laing's Lane and on Michigan Avenue from the lane to Massachusetts Avenue, where it will tie in with an old sewer.

Will Cost $8,281

The 1,926 foot sewage line will include 630 feet of 10 inch line leading from Oldtown Road, 600 feet of eight inch line on Kentucky Avenue and another 696 feet of sewer line on Michigan Avenue.

Six manholes are included in the project which is estimated to cost $8,281.78. The work is being financed from the Sewage Bond Fund.

Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, said yesterday that the line is now at Massachusetts Avenue and Laing Lane.

The work, Corrigan said, has been progressing splendidly in recent weeks and estimated that several good weeks will see the work completed.

Other Project Slated

Slated for construction this year is a similar sewer on Bedford Road to eliminate a serious health hazard in that area, Mrs. Roeder said.

Work on the Mapleside project has been facilitated by the use of the shovel the city purchase last year.

Mrs. Roeder said workers report the equipment has been working "like a charm" in spite of the wet condition of the ground in that area.

Work has been relayed on several occasions as workers had to resort to dynamite to blast rock formations found along the route.

A decrease in Postal receipts was noted during February over January 1951. In January $35,768.95 was spent while in February $30,036.76 was realized.

U. S. Savings Bonds showed an increase to the amount of $2,812.50. In January $6,337.50 was spent while in February $9,150.00 worth of bonds were bought.

There was a decrease of $3,753.00 in postal savings deposits during February of this year. During January $363,522.00 was realized. There was no change in savings stamps receipts during February.

Building permits showed an increase of $7,390.00 in March over February. Last month $104,150.00 was spent for permits.

A decrease in registrations for employment and an increase in placements was seen during last month. There were 110 less registered and 27 more placed in jobs during the first half of March than during February.

Cumberland showed a 25 percent increase during January in debits to individual accounts as compared to figures of January 1950. In the Fifth Federal Reserve District retail sales in furniture stores showed an increase of 22 percent, department stores an increase of 28 percent and a 22 percent increase was noted in stocks during January over the same month last year.

Area Army Reserves To Know Classifications By New Plan

Members of the area U. S. Army Reserve Corps will know by June 1 where they stand with the army under present plans to give each reservist a complete physical examination during the next two months.

The project is under the general direction of Col. Grand Jury Recommends Repairs To County Property

Group Returns 11 Indictments

The April grand jury of Allegany County Circuit completed three days of deliberation yesterday afternoon by submitting a seven-page report which recommended certain repairs and improvements to county-owned property, but, in general, commended county officials for the conduct of their duties.

After Associate Judge Mogran C. Harris received the report he addressed them briefly on the importance of the jury system in the United States. He then informed the 25 grand jurors that they were not being discharged, but merely excused. Although he expressed doubt that they would be recalled, he said the April grand jury would not be discharged until October.

Fletcher's Duty

Judge Harris told the grand jury that it was the duty of State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher to refer the grand jury recommendations to the proper county authorities for appropriate action.

The grand jury report endorsed the proposed four-year program of the Allegany County Board of Commissioners which calls for expenditures of approximately $172,237 for repairs and maintenance and $120,200 for new construction and remodeling of county-owned property.

In its report the grand jury noted that 11 indictments were returned as a result of its deliberations.

Court House Needs

The need for repairs at the County Court House was given considerable emphasis. It was contended that the entrance to the Court House should be kept neat and clean so that citizens coming to the building would be favorably impressed upon entering the edifice.

Paint for the howitzer on the Court House lawn and new flooring in the county agent's office on the third floor also were recommended.

The report was signed by Porter D. Collins, foreman, and George Schwarzenbach and James M. Carter, clerks.

The full report follows: —

FIRST—We have been in session three days, have examined 35 witnesses and have returned 11 indictments.

SECOND—The Grand Jury, in its report for January, 1951, made numerous recommendations to the Board of County Commissioners for repairs and improvements to the County institutions — including the Allegany County Home, Sylvan Retreat, the Allegany County Infirmary, the Allegany County Jail, and the Court House. The recommendations made in this previous report were extensive and complete. In fact, grand juries prior to January, 1951, had made similar recommendations; although in not such detail.

The Allegany County Commissioners appeared before the present Grand Jury and submitted a long-range program for repairs and capital improvements to the Court House, Allegany County Jail, Union Street Building, Allegany County Garage, Allegany County Infirmary, Sylvan Retreat, Allegany County Home, and the Cumberland Street Building now occupied by the Welfare Board. Included in this program was the installation of a new central laundry, at the cost of $60,000.00, to serve Sylvan Retreat, the County Home and County Infirmary. This program is set up to be carried out over a period of four years, beginning in 1951 and ending in 1954. It includes a total cost estimated at $172,237.00 for repairs and maintenance over this period of time, and $120,200.00 for new construction and capital improvements to the buildings and equipment heretofore listed. The total amount to be expended on this four-year program is $292,437.00, of which amount $56,305.00 will be spent in 1951; $70,725.00 in 1952; $18,770.00 in 1953; and $26,437.00 in 1954 for maintenance and repairs.

In the reports hereinafter set forth by the committees from your Grand Jury that have inspected the various institutions, practically all of the suggested repairs or improvements, which might have been suggested, have been provided for in the four-year program submitted by the County Commissioners and it will be unnecessary to go into detail in these reports as has been done by past grand juries.

It is the opinion of your Grand

To Follow Through With Present Pact

Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), will follow through with its present contract until its expiration date if the Celanese Corporation does not feel morally obligated to grant a cost of living increase, Playford Aldridge, president of the local, announced last night.

The first request for the wage boost, the union said, was made January 17 in a letter from Herbert W. Payne, TWUA rayon director, to H. C. Givens, Jr., Amcelle plant manager, proposing a supplemental agreement based on the Bureau of Labor price index.

Suggests 3.7 Boost

Payne suggested that under a WSB ruling, the local could be granted a 3.7 cent increase.

On January 26, the union said, the company pointed out the agreement was but five months old and that it was under no obligation to adjust wages. The letter added the company did not favor an arrangement based on an automatic adjustment of wages but said it would meet to discuss the matter on the understanding that its rights under the agreement would not be affected.

At the first joint meeting March 15, Payne made the union request verbally, Aldridge said. He said the company denied consideration of an escalator clause.

Cites Other Boosts

Aldridge said the union's position was that the company is morally obligated to grant the cost of living increase.

The Amcelle request, he said, was made only after American Viscose and Industrial Rayon granted voluntary three cent boosts to their employes.

Payne, at the time, cited a three cent boost at the Celco plant last September, followed by a 11½ cent increase in February, 1951, for a total of 14½ cents, resulting in the company meeting the WSB 10 per cent formula at that plant, Aldridge said.

Union officials said the company, at the second meeting March 15, formally rejected the escalator clause and asked what the union was willing to give in exchange for the proposed increase.

Will Follow Through

During the discussion, the union said, the company proposed extending the present pact for one year from March 15, with a clause providing reopening of the pact once for wages, but qualifying that if no agreement were reached, the union would have no recourse.

The union said its negotiating committee, with membership sanction, declined the offer because of the strings attached, since the Viscose and Rayon firms made no conditions in their offers.

Aldridge said the union position is that if the company does not feel morally obligated to grant cost of living boosts to its employes, the local will follow through with its contract until the expiration date August 8, 1951.

Coroner's Jury Acquits Rutter

Local Man's Death Termed Justifiable

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide yesterday at Uniontown, Pa., in the fatal shooting of William R. Durbin, Cumberland, by a Connellsville, Pa., resident.

According to an Associated Press dispatch, Donald C. Rutter was cleared of the charge. Rutter stated that he shot Durbin as a prowler who was attempting to climb into his second story bedroom.

The shooting occured on Saturday, March 24. Durbin was a Western Maryland Railroad brakeman and member of a train crew, which was spending the night at Dickerson Run, Pa. He was killed instantly when a German Luger bullet penetrated his heart.

County Detective Frank Kane, who answered a summons by Rutter, went to the scene of the shooting. Rutter said he fired two shots at the person on the porch outside his window, but wasn't sure whether the man had jumped or fallen from the porch roof.

Durbin was a veteran of World War II and a member of William McKaig Lodge 440, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. His home was on Fairmont Avenue here.

New Recovery Plant At Luke Mill Improves Firm's Operation

Facility Begins Action This Week

Changes of major economic importance to this area went into effect at the Luke mill of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company this week.

A new recovery plant, housed in an eight-story steel and tile building at the west end of the mill yard, began operations, enabling the mill to switch over from an old soda process to the modern sulphate method of making pulp.

To Aid Community

This change means that the mill, which is the main economic support of the community, can now take better advantage of the supply of hardwoods available in this region and begin to fortify its position in the highly competitive field of publication papers.

The key to the change-over is a large new smelter unit, especially designed to recover the chemicals used to cook wood chips by the sulphate method. This installation, which took over a year to build, includes a 250-ton recovery furnace, capable of handling more than 600,000 gallons of spent liquor daily, combined with a boiler unit which will produce about 100,000 pounds of high pressure steam per hour.

In reviewing the background of the change, plant officials explained that the kinds of paper made at any integrated pulp and paper mill depend largely on the kinds of wood within economic reach. Strong papers for packaging and similar uses are made most frequently where ample stands of pine and other conifers grow nearby. Where the forest is mostly hardwood, as at Luke, pulp more readily goes into papers for magazines and other printing purposes. With the soda process, which it helped pioneer, the Luke mill for years held a top position in this field. The advent of the sulphate method, however, made it difficult to keep up with newer mills producing stronger and relatively better hardwood pulp, at lower costs.

Major Problems

There were a number of major technical and economic problems to be overcome, plant officials explained, before the new process could be introduced at Luke. Most of these have now been solved, or at least reduced to manageable proportions, and with the new pulp lay-out and other improvements completed or planned, the company expects the competitive position of the Luke mill to improve steadily. The mill, it was pointed out, enjoys an excellent location with respect to wood supply and transportation to the market.

In the first step of the new recovery process, spent liquor from the digesters, where the wood is cooked, is boiled under vacuum in a battery of multiple effect evaporators, reducing it to the consistency of molasses. This soup then is piped to the recovery unit where a cascade evaporator, using heat provided by waste gases from the boiler, concentrates it further. To this concentration is added the chemical fines collected by the precipitator, plus salt cake, to change the chemicals back into their original form and thus complete the recovery cycle.

New Digester

The big smelter replaces seven costly rotary incinerators and 13 leachers used in the past to recover spent liquor from the soda process. The rest of the pulp manufacturing layout at the Luke mill remains about the same as in the past, except that one new digester of 3,520 cubic-foot capacity has been added to supplement the five digesters formerly in operation. The sixth digester may ultimately allow the plant to increase its pulp production from 170 to about 200 tons per day, bringing the plant's paper and pulp production in closer balance.

Plant officials also explained that the new recovery unit should result in considerable improvement in the condition of the Potomac River, from which the plant draws its water supply and into which it returns waste water. It was pointed out that the capacity of the old recovery line was not sufficient to handle all the liquor required for the 170 tons of pulp produced daily at the mill, with the result that some of the weaker wastes escaped into the river. The new smelter not only is more efficient than the old equipment, recovering nearly all the spent liquor for re-use, but is

Mrs. Roeder Says Bedford Road Next

Work on a sewage construction project in the Mapleside Section is progressing on schedule and similar construction on Bedford Road is slated this year, Mrs. Lucile Roeder, commissioner of Streets and Public Property, anounced last night.

The extensive Mapleside program, which began February 16, was planned to correct what was considered the most serious sewage problem within the city.

The line began at the intersection of Oldtown Road and an unnamed lane at Brookland Addition, extended two blocks north on the lane, on Kentucky Avenue from the lane to Laing's Lane and on Michigan Avenue from the lane to Massachusetts Avenue, where it will tie in with an old sewer.

Will Cost $8,281

The 1,926 foot sewage line will include 630 feet of 10 inch line leading from Oldtown Road, 600 feet of eight inch line on Kentucky Avenue and another 696 feet of sewer line on Michigan Avenue.

Six manholes are included in the project which is estimated to cost $8,281.78. The work is being financed from the Sewage Bond Fund.

Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, said yesterday that the line is now at Massachusetts Avenue and Laing Lane.

The work, Corrigan said, has been progressing splendidly in recent weeks and estimated that several good weeks will see the work completed.

Other Project Slated

Slated for construction this year is a similar sewer on Bedford Road to eliminate a serious health hazard in that area, Mrs. Roeder said.

Work on the Mapleside project has been facilitated by the use of the shovel the city purchase last year.

Mrs. Roeder said workers report the equipment has been working "like a charm" in spite of the wet condition of the ground in that area.

Work has been relayed on several occasions as workers had to resort to dynamite to blast rock formations found along the route.

Building permits showed an increase of $7,390.00 in March over February. Last month $104,150.00 was spent for permits.

A decrease in registrations for employment and an increase in placements was seen during last month. There were 110 less registered and 27 more placed in jobs during the first half of March than during February.

Cumberland showed a 25 percent increase during January in debits to individual accounts as compared to figures of January 1950. In the Fifth Federal Reserve District retail sales in furniture stores showed an increase of 22 percent, department stores an increase of 28 percent and a 22 percent increase was noted in stocks during January over the same month last year.

Area Army Reserves To Know Classifications By New Plan

Members of the area U. S. Army Reserve Corps will know by June 1 where they stand with the army under present plans to give each reservist a complete physical examination during the next two months.

The project is under the general direction of Col. Paul Padget, a medical officer of the Maryland Military District, who is here to orient a board of local reserve doctors in the methods to be used in examining the men. Col. Padget will indoctrinate Col. Wylie M. Faw, Lt. Col. Frank T. Crawley, Maj. S. G. Weisman, and Lt. Col. Albert C. Eskin in procedures to be followed in classifying reservists in Allegany and Garrett Counties.

The project will be undertaken by local personnel for the most part assisted by Col. Padget and teams of enlisted technicians from Baltimore headquarters.

Present plans call for completion of the examinations by June 1. Baltimore district will be covered during this month and outlying areas during May. The project is part of a coming national program which will result in classification of every reservist so that he will know what his status with the Army is at all times and so that the Army can have available a comprehensive list of all men available for service.

Grand Jury Recommends Repairs To County Property

Group Returns 11 Indictments

The April grand jury of Allegany County Circuit completed three days of deliberation yesterday afternoon by submitting a seven-page report which recommended certain repairs and improvements to county-owned property, but, in general, commended county officials for the conduct of their duties.

After Associate Judge Mogran C. Harris received the report he addressed them briefly on the importance of the jury system in the United States. He then informed the 25 grand jurors that they were not being discharged, but merely excused. Although he expressed doubt that they would be recalled, he said the April grand jury would not be discharged until October.

Fletcher's Duty

Judge Harris told the grand jury that it was the duty of State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher to refer the grand jury recommendations to the proper county authorities for appropriate action.

The grand jury report endorsed the proposed four-year program of the Allegany County Board of Commissioners which calls for expenditures of approximately $172,237 for repairs and maintenance and $120,200 for new construction and remodeling of county-owned property.

In its report the grand jury noted that 11 indictments were returned as a result of its deliberations.

Court House Needs

The need for repairs at the County Court House was given considerable emphasis. It was contended that the entrance to the Court House should be kept neat and clean so that citizens coming to the building would be favorably impressed upon entering the edifice.

Paint for the howitzer on the Court House lawn and new flooring in the county agent's office on the third floor also were recommended.

The report was signed by Porter D. Collins, foreman, and George Schwarzenbach and James M. Carter, clerks.

The full report follows: —

FIRST—We have been in session three days, have examined 35 witnesses and have returned 11 indictments.

SECOND—The Grand Jury, in its report for January, 1951, made numerous recommendations to the Board of County Commissioners for repairs and improvements to the County institutions — including the Allegany County Home, Sylvan Retreat, the Allegany County Infirmary, the Allegany County Jail, and the Court House. The recommendations made in this previous report were extensive and complete. In fact, grand juries prior to January, 1951, had made similar recommendations; although in not such detail.

The Allegany County Commissioners appeared before the present Grand Jury and submitted a long-range program for repairs and capital improvements to the Court House, Allegany County Jail, Union Street Building, Allegany County Garage, Allegany County Infirmary, Sylvan Retreat, Allegany County Home, and the Cumberland Street Building now occupied by the Welfare Board. Included in this program was the installation of a new central laundry, at the cost of $60,000.00, to serve Sylvan Retreat, the County Home and County Infirmary. This program is set up to be carried out over a period of four years, beginning in 1951 and ending in 1954. It includes a total cost estimated at $172,237.00 for repairs and maintenance over this period of time, and $120,200.00 for new construction and capital improvements to the buildings and equipment heretofore listed. The total amount to be expended on this four-year program is $292,437.00, of which amount $56,305.00 will be spent in 1951; $70,725.00 in 1952; $18,770.00 in 1953; and $26,437.00 in 1954 for maintenance and repairs.

In the reports hereinafter set forth by the committees from your Grand Jury that have inspected the various institutions, practically all of the suggested repairs or improvements, which might have been suggested, have been provided for in the four-year program submitted by the County Commissioners and it will be unnecessary to go into detail in these reports as has been done by past grand juries.

It is the opinion of your Grand

To Follow Through With Present Pact

Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), will follow through with its present contract until its expiration date if the Celanese Corporation does not feel morally obligated to grant a cost of living increase, Playford Aldridge, president of the local, announced last night.

The first request for the wage boost, the union said, was made January 17 in a letter from Herbert W. Payne, TWUA rayon director, to H. C. Givens, Jr., Amcelle plant manager, proposing a supplemental agreement based on the Bureau of Labor price index.

Suggests 3.7 Boost

Payne suggested that under a WSB ruling, the local could be granted a 3.7 cent increase.

On January 26, the union said, the company pointed out the agreement was but five months old and that it was under no obligation to adjust wages. The letter added the company did not favor an arrangement based on an automatic adjustment of wages but said it would meet to discuss the matter on the understanding that its rights under the agreement would not be affected.

At the first joint meeting March 15, Payne made the union request verbally, Aldridge said. He said the company denied consideration of an escalator clause.

Cites Other Boosts

Aldridge said the union's position was that the company is morally obligated to grant the cost of living increase.

The Amcelle request, he said, was made only after American Viscose and Industrial Rayon granted voluntary three cent boosts to their employes.

Payne, at the time, cited a three cent boost at the Celco plant last September, followed by a 11½ cent increase in February, 1951, for a total of 14½ cents, resulting in the company meeting the WSB 10 per cent formula at that plant, Aldridge said.

Union officials said the company, at the second meeting March 15, formally rejected the escalator clause and asked what the union was willing to give in exchange for the proposed increase.

Will Follow Through

During the discussion, the union said, the company proposed extending the present pact for one year from March 15, with a clause providing reopening of the pact once for wages, but qualifying that if no agreement were reached, the union would have no recourse.

The union said its negotiating committee, with membership sanction, declined the offer because of the strings attached, since the Viscose and Rayon firms made no conditions in their offers.

Aldridge said the union position is that if the company does not feel morally obligated to grant cost of living boosts to its employes, the local will follow through with its contract until the expiration date August 8, 1951.

Coroner's Jury Acquits Rutter

Local Man's Death Termed Justifiable

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide yesterday at Uniontown, Pa., in the fatal shooting of William R. Durbin, Cumberland, by a Connellsville, Pa., resident.

According to an Associated Press dispatch, Donald C. Rutter was cleared of the charge. Rutter stated that he shot Durbin as a prowler who was attempting to climb into his second story bedroom.

The shooting occured on Saturday, March 24. Durbin was a Western Maryland Railroad brakeman and member of a train crew, which was spending the night at Dickerson Run, Pa. He was killed instantly when a German Luger bullet penetrated his heart.

County Detective Frank Kane, who answered a summons by Rutter, went to the scene of the shooting. Rutter said he fired two shots at the person on the porch outside his window, but wasn't sure whether the man had jumped or fallen from the porch roof.

Durbin was a veteran of World War II and a member of William McKaig Lodge 440, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. His home was on Fairmont Avenue here.
